Coal Groups End Feud to Get Together On NRA Code

North and South Wings Drop Impasse at President's Plea.

Agree to Admit Labor Spokesmen

Auto Magnates Seek to Protect Their Union Barriers.

President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Recovery Administrator, yesterday began to revamp the dissection-torn soft coal industry, bringing around a conference table for the first time dissenting Northern and Southern producers and union labor leaders.

It was the first time Southern operators met with union labor representatives and the first time they met with the Northern producers to consider general problems of the industry.

Scope of the conferences extended beyond questions of collective bargaining, wages and hours and included production, distribution, price and other problems which, in the words of Gen. Johnson, have "bedeviled this vital industry for years."

The coal conferences pushed into the background continued efforts of the automobile industry to find some way to write open shop safeguards into their code. Both the automobile and the coal conferences are to be resumed today.

Administration Victory.

Agreement of the operators to meet with labor and competitors to work out a code was considered a distinct victory for the Recovery Administration.

"This conference," Gen. Johnson said, "will proceed by direction of the President under supervision of the National Recovery Administration, which will lay down the program of negotiations and act as mediator throughout. The officials of this administration in this endeavor will be the Administrator, the General Counsel, Donald Richberg, the Deputy Administrator in charge, E. M. Simpson.

"This arrangement was made possible through the good office of the President and has his approval.

"With such a fair beginning it is of the utmost importance that the public and all interested persons suspend judgment on all controversial questions here and give their earnest and public-spirited support to the efforts of the Recovery Administration, to bring peace to this troubled situation."

Meetings of the coal industry representatives were held behind closed doors and after a recess for dinner were resumed last night by a general subcommittee.

Accord Prevails.

"Distinct progress" was reported by Mr. Simpson. John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers.

Soviet Upsets Wheat Accord

Export Figure Demands Threaten to Disrupt London Meeting.

London, Aug. 24 (AP)—Demands by Soviet Russia tonight threatened to break up the world wheat conference, in session here seeking international accord on acreage reductions and price raising.

Russian representatives accepted, in principle, the suggestion they restrict exports for the next two years but demanded an annual export quota of 90,000,000 bushels a year.

The figure was twice as much as the exporting countries, including the United States, were willing to concede. Soviet Russia's adherence to the world wheat accord admittedly was essential to success.

The Soviet delegates talked to officials at Moscow several times today, and the Big Four delegates—France, the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina—were hopeful they would agree to cut down their export demands and permit initialing of the pact.

Struggles With Big Four.

The conference developed into a struggle between the Soviets, desperate in their need for foreign exchange, and the Big Four, equally eager to get an international agreement on wheat production and export, to avert a "dumping" war, threatened by Washington unless action is forthcoming this week.

District Bread Prices Raised by Wholesalers

Washington wholesale bread prices were raised a cent a loaf yesterday. The new price scale is understood to be general in bakeries throughout the city.

Retail bakers, it was learned, are undecided as to their course of action. Many inaugurated new prices with the wholesale boost, while others temporarily continued on the old scale. The price at wholesale bakeries was raised from 6 cents to 7 cents a loaf.

Cuban Senator's Kin Hurt in Crash

Montalvo, Wife, 4 Others Victim of Collision in New York.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Four persons, including Carlos Montalvo, 35, and Sofia B. Montalvo, 29, said to be the son and daughter-in-law of the president of the Cuban Senate, were injured seriously, and four others less seriously hurt today in an automobile accident at Queensboro Bridge.

The automobile of former Mayor John F. Hyman collided with an ambulance. Carlos Montalvo, who gave his address as the Hyman home, suffered a possible fracture of the skull. Sofia Montalvo suffered possible fractures of ribs and right arm.

Alberto Barreras, 55, father of Mrs. Montalvo, was bruised.

Cuba Dissolves Congress; Vote Will Be Called

Machado Is Reported Set for Plane Flight to Miami.

Havana, Aug. 24 (AP)—The Cuban cabinet tonight decided to dissolve Congress immediately and return to the 1901 constitution, thereby throwing out all officers elected by virtue of the 1928 constitutional reforms, and plans to call an election for a constitutional assembly.

The new regime of President Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, it was said, has decided to take this action due to the conflicting aspirations of the various factions supporting it.

These include the students, the political scientists and the followers of prominent Cubans. The students have come out flatly for abandonment of a constitutional form of government and formation of a revolutionary regime.

Meanwhile, an army lieutenant was shot and killed by a mob at Manzanillo as the government pondered means of disarming all civilians and bringing an end to lawlessness.

The victim, Maximiliano Casamayor, was set upon as he arrived aboard a steamer from Niquero. He was reported to have been a follower of Machado. He was clubbed, his clothes torn off and then shot.

The resignations of many ministers and representatives already have been handed to De Cespedes.

Most of these were followers of Machado, who either have left the country or have sought to keep out of the limelight since the fall of the former president.

Miami, Fla., Aug. 24 (AP)—A dispatch from Nassau tonight stated an airplane had cleared the customs office there with Gerardo Machado, deposed president of Cuba, and three associates and that it probably would take off for Miami at daybreak tomorrow.

Machado Requests Guard.

Nassau, Aug. 24 (AP)—Armed guards were placed today over Gerardo Machado for the first time since he fled for his life from the island republic two weeks ago after the military overthrow of his government.

The protective measures were taken at Machado's own request since he became frightened by reports from Havana that his life is in danger and also by the arrival of a liquor dealer's airplane in the harbor here.

Guards were placed about Machado's hotel and the Commandante a Weibel of the Bahaman Constabulary.

Arkansas Is Wet After 2 Decades

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 24 (AP)—Beer became legal in Arkansas at 11:13 today when Gov. F. B. F. signed the engrossed copy of the bill making the sale and manufacture of 3.2 beer and light wines legal immediately.

The governor's signature was affixed to the bill soon after the State Senate had recorded 24 votes for the bill and 7 against in a final roll call on the emergency clause tacked on as an amendment in the House yesterday.

The bill legalizes alcoholic beverages in Arkansas for the first time in nearly 20 years.

Claudette Colbert Falls Victim of Appendicitis

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (AP)—Claudette Colbert, the actress, was stricken with appendicitis today and was removed to a hospital. Physicians said they were undecided whether to operate.

Mother of Three, Doomed to Die in Chair, Starves Self to Death, Children at Her Side

LaGrange, Tex., Aug. 24 (AP)—Self-imposed starvation brought death to Mrs. Maria Dach, 36-year-old farm woman, and saved her from going to the electric chair for slaying Henry Stover, 58-year-old helper.

Mrs. Dach, mother of three children, died in her cell while awaiting action on an appeal from the death sentence. She had eaten only three meals in 37 days. Her three children were at her side when death came.

For days she was unconscious. A physician watched her closely and then began to treat her for a

Slashed Dry Forces Here Reorganized

Cummings Assigns 50 Men to Territory of D. C. Office.

Dunnigan, Famous for Detective Exploits, Put in Charge.

A prohibition enforcement field service, which has been more than cut in half by the new deal, was being reorganized last night by Attorney General Cummings.

With strength reduced from more than 2,200 to 1,000, the force's orders were changed from "get all violators" to "get only the big conspirators and let the little fellows go."

Changes in the organization which eliminate 12 administrative districts and 132 field offices, and in their stead set up only 22 offices throughout the United States, were announced. Scores of administrators of districts or deputy administrators were ordered discharged or demoted.

Under the old set-up, before the Prohibition Bureau was merged with the Justice Department's Division of Investigation, the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, North and South Carolina were one administrative district.

There were approximately 10 agents in Washington, 70 in Maryland and 30 in Virginia.

50 Men Assigned Here.

Under the new plan announced by the Attorney General, that force of 110 men is being reduced to 50 with headquarters here.

Attorney General Cummings made known he expects big results from the Washington force, for, despite the shifting alignments and curtailed numbers, it is the fourth largest enforcement unit in the country. Only New York, with 110 men, and Chicago and Philadelphia, with 60 each, will be larger.

One reason for Cummings' expectations is the new chief of the Washington-Maryland-Virginia area. He is William E. Dunnigan, whirlwind special agent, who made himself famous for detective work which brought doom to powerful racketeering distilling and brewing interests operating out of Philadelphia and Kansas.

A native of Missouri, 41 years old, a World War officer and married, he early won renown as a prohibition investigator at Omaha in 1923. His Kansas City exploits in 1926 brought further fame. Since he had been special agent at Philadelphia in charge of ferreting out international rum running and big beer conspiracies among the Pennsylvania and New Jersey liquor lords.

Not Under Civil Service.

The new force will not be under the protection of the Civil Service laws, as was the old unit. Protection was removed, Cummings said, because Civil Service laws do not apply to the division which is a bureau of the Justice Department.

"The Division of Investigation was a growing unit and the prohibition unit was one which was growing smaller," he added.

Besides, he said, Civil Service restrictions "hampers" men "who must be called from bed and stand ready for service at all hours."

"Does removal of the Civil Service restrictions mean the men may be replaced later for political appointees or for other reasons?" a reporter asked.

"It has the effect of making it possible to displace anyone not doing a good job," Cummings replied. "The force will be surveyed to determine which are the good men."

The Hoover administration, he added, "overloaded and overburdened" the taxpayers by having too big a prohibition force.

Croatian Leader Assassins' Victim

Neudorfer Shot to Death at Home as His Wife Watches.

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Aug. 24 (AP)—Mirko Neudorfer, Croatian leader and former minister of finance and agriculture, was assassinated today on his estate near Zlatar in the presence of his wife.

Two unidentified youths handed him a letter. As he was reading it they drew revolvers, fired three shots, took the letter and disappeared in the woods.

Neudorfer was a close friend of the late Stefan Raditch, leader of the Croatian Peasant Party, who was shot to death in 1928.

stomach ailment. Occasionally, she broke her fast to nibble at the food the jailer brought her, but she lost weight and her 100 pounds when she died after a sharp contrast to the 200 pounds of three months ago.

The first thirteen days after she was convicted, May 25, Mrs. Dach refused food altogether. Finally, she was persuaded to eat a few fastables, but she quickly began fasting again.

Mrs. Dach accepted her death sentence without show of emotion, but clung to her claim that she shot Stover in defense of herself and her children. She insisted that she lived in fear of him as he helped

80 Are Sent to Jail In Orchard Riot

Guardsmen Stop Battle of Yakima Growers and Labor Agitators.

Yakima, Wash., Aug. 24 (AP)—Two companies of National Guardsmen were called out late today after a pitched battle near here between fruit growers and labor agitators. Eighty persons, including some women, were arrested. Numerous fruit growers and agitators were treated for cuts and bruises. The growers, armed with pick handles, drove their opponents from orchards into Yakima.

One company of guardsmen, with machine guns, was made the target of missiles thrown by sympathizers of the laborers.

Crisis Reached In War Against Sleep Epidemic

All Doctors in St. Louis to Recheck Patients to Find All Cases.

St. Louis, Aug. 24 (AP)—Health officials tonight reached what they described as a "crisis" in their fight to prevent spread of sleeping sickness, which has claimed the lives of 28 of its 215 victims here since July 3.

Health Commissioner Joseph P. Breck issued an appeal to every physician in the city to recheck every patient on his list in an effort to locate every possible case and to report them for isolation at once.

Breck estimated that approximately 600 persons are suffering here of the unusual disease, but that most of the cases have not been recognized because of their mildness.

"It is the worst outbreak of this disease in the history of the country," said Dr. J. P. Leake, of the United States Public Health Service. Official records show that more than 200 persons in this area have suffered from the disease since July 3.

The three new death victims today were Mrs. Lucy Mattingly, 75; Mrs. Mary Garner, 68, and Mrs. Clara McClure, 54. Almost all of the 28 victims were persons past middle age.

Physicians say that thus far none of the cases has been lethargic encephalitis, in which the patient falls into a complete state of sleep.

Those stricken have fallen into a semiconscious state, doctors say. The most pronounced symptoms are severe headaches, a stiff neck, high fever and a tendency to drowsiness.

"When I say there will be Federal indictments, I mean just that!" Father Coughlin shouted.

The Detroit Bankers Co. might better be called the Detroit Loaners Co., officials knew the subsidiaries were being wrecked by a maze of loans between groups, but they continued their practice.

Capitalism Empties Churches.

Capitalism in this country has done more to empty the churches, to create Communists and to ruin men than all the writings of Marx and his followers, Father Coughlin charged at the opening of the session.

At this point Prosecutor O'Brien asked the witness if he were a Democrat or a Republican.

"Some people may be interested to know that I am neither a Democrat nor a Republican," he answered quickly. "I am interested in principles, in men more than in the tenets of any party."

Father Coughlin was told he would be subject to call for further testimony. Tomorrow United States Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, is expected to present his testimony of events in Washington preceding the closing of the two banks.

Victim of Robbers Critically Stabbed

Also Slugged and Beaten When He Resists Three Men.

Slugged, stabbed and beaten by three colored men, who accosted him at First street and Virginia avenue southwest, Hubertson W. Ross, 4029 Connecticut avenue northwest, was taken to Casualty Hospital early today in a critical condition.

Police believed Ross resisted when the three men robbed him. Ross bore marks of having been beaten with a piece of metal pipe. A knife wound in the back punctured a lung. His nose was broken.

Ross was found senseless on the street and was sent to the hospital. He was robbed of $15, he told police at the hospital.

Duce Gets Defense Post in Shake-Up

Balbo to Be Staff Chief in Cabinet Changes Contemplated.

Rome, Aug. 24 (AP)—A drastic shake-up in his cabinet is being contemplated by Benito Mussolini, it was learned authoritatively today.

Il Duce plans personally to assume the portfolio of the newly created ministry of national defense, in which the air, land and sea forces are to be combined.

Air Marshal Italo Balbo, air minister, will become Mussolini's chief of staff of the combined forces. The reports said Dino Grandi, now Ambassador in London, would return to his former post as minister for foreign affairs, and Count Cesare de Vecchi, envoy to the Holy See, would become president of the Senate.

Hawks Hops to Seattle; Off to Winnipeg Today

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 24 (AP)—Capt. Frank Hawks landed his monoplane here today, 8 hours and 35 minutes after taking off from Minneapolis.

He said he would start a speed flight tomorrow from Vancouver, B. C., to Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Hoover Quiz On Banks Is Sought Anew

New Move Is Revealed as Father Coughlin Rocks Court.

Detroit Priest Names 3 Who "Can't Escape U. S. Indictment."

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24 (AP)—As Father Charles E. Coughlin concluded two days of scathing testimony regarding Detroit's banks, officials conducting a grand jury investigation of the banking situation here announced the basis of a new appeal for the appearance of former President Hoover.

Judge Harry B. Keidan told a tense courtroom that efforts to induce Mr. Hoover to change his decision not to appear as a witness were being renewed.

"When Mr. Hoover learns that several of the men he designated as possessed of first-hand information have already appeared on the witness stand here and refused to give the information we sought, I feel he will reconsider his refusal to testify," the jurist explained.

May Act on Criticism.

Other observers felt that Mr. Hoover would be more strongly inclined to come to Detroit in view of the criticism of his administration and his policies leveled at him recently by Father Coughlin and Senator James Couzens.

The controversy between Father Coughlin and the Detroit Free Press, which ran from his pulpit to the columns of that paper, was renewed again today when the priest charged from the witness stand that the newspaper had falsified a statement of a stock transaction to make it appear that he had "gambled in the stock market."

The packed courtroom gasped when Father Coughlin shouted the names of three former bank officials as "foulmouthed" of escaping Federal indictments.

Names Published.

Father Coughlin named E. D. Stair, publisher of the Free Press and former president of the Detroit Bankers Co., holding company for the closed First National Bank-Detroit; Peter J. Monaghan, attorney and former bank official, and William W. Mills, former chairman of the board of the First National.

"When I say there will be Federal indictments, I mean just that!" Father Coughlin shouted.

The Detroit Bankers Co. might better be called the Detroit Loaners Co., officials knew the subsidiaries were being wrecked by a maze of loans between groups, but they continued their practice.

Hurricane Death Toll Swells to 47 in East; 4 Killed in Washington

300 Work on Wreckage of Express Train That Killed Two.

Capital Engineer One of Victims as Bridge Collapses.

While thousands worked to overcome the havoc wrought by the storm in the Capital, 300 trained men struggled with the wreck of the Crescent Limited.

The crack extra-fare express was hurled early yesterday from the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad when flood waters undermined the central abutment of the bridge over the Eastern Branch, just inside the District.

All day and all night the crews of railroad men worked, first with acetylene torches to clear the debris from the approaches to the bridge, and then with three cranes to lift aside the wrecked cars, preparatory to rebuilding the broken bridge.

Late in the evening a derrick lifting the crushed engine from a grave of mud uncovered the body of the engineer, Arthur H. Hyde, of Washington. The body of A. H. Hyde, the freeman, of Havre de Grace, was recovered earlier in the day. It had been ground into the mud of the embankment by a coach.

Victims Leave Hospitals.

Three of 10 casualties taken to Emergency Hospital yesterday morning were discharged before nightfall, and it was stated that none of the remaining seven treated there suffered serious injury. At Casualty Hospital it was said that all five of its patients would be discharged today or tomorrow.

Benjamin Johnson, of 2417 Franklin street northwest, assistant track foreman, a passenger in the cab of the ill-fated train, was stated to have suffered most among the injured, but hospital officials said that his condition was not serious. Johnson was thrown clear of the engine cab, but was struck on the head by the swaying tender and forced so deep into the mud that the combined efforts of two passengers were needed to extricate him.

The wreck was declared by railroad officials to be the most serious from a point of damage in this district since the Terra Cotta disaster. The limited casualty list was due largely to the fact that car couplings held and prevented several of the Pullman coaches from falling into the river after passengers were evacuated. The limited number of passengers also was a factor. There were less than 30 aboard.

Engineer Held Warned.

The Crescent Express is one of the crack express trains running between New York and New Orleans. It is an extra-fare train and is run over four lines. It was in the hands of the Pennsylvania Railroad when the wreck occurred.

Assistant Track Foreman Johnson stated that just before the train arrived at the bridge he had warned

Pope Pius Visits His Rural Home

Leaves Rome Second Time; Sees Plane Crash; Tire Blows Out.

Vatican City, Aug. 24 (AP)—Pope Pius XII left the Rome metropolitan area for the second time since he became head of the Roman Catholic Church in 1922, when he motored to his summer residence and farm at Castel Gandolfo today.

The trip caused a brief delay during today's 34-mile round trip. He traveled in an American car, accompanied by his nephew, Count Ratti.

A military airplane crashed at Ciampino Airport near Rome today, just after the pontiff's automobile passed while returning to the Vatican. The machine struck telephone wires and was wrecked. The pilot injured a leg.

Marion Howard to Wed Scot at London in Fall

Boston, Aug. 24 (AP)—Announcement was made here today of the engagement of Miss Marion Poett Howard, daughter of the late Edward Whiting Howard, of San Mateo, Calif., to Ian Gilbert Mitchell-Innes, of Stowe, Scotland.

Miss Howard is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Fraser, Jr., wife of the American Consul at London. The wedding will be in London late in October.

Young Woodin's Illness Declared Not Serious

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 24 (AP)—Dr. W. Paul Holbrook, physician attending William H. Woodin, Jr., said today the condition of the son of the United States Secretary of the Treasury is "not of immediate seriousness."

Young Woodin's trouble, Dr. Holbrook said, is the result of a heart attack suffered several weeks ago while on an airplane trip in northern Arizona. He has been in a sanatorium here and was reported last night to have suffered a relapse.

Child Victims Of Flood Beg Aid of Fliers

Western Shore Resorts Laid Waste by Gale

Homes Battered, Bridges Gone, Communication Cut Along Bay.

Swept by wind-churned waters of Chesapeake Bay, resorts along the Western Shore today lay wrecked or flooded.

With battered homes, washed out bridges and broken communication lines, residents of North Beach, Chesapeake Beach, Plum Point and Old Plum Point were counting the damage in tens of thousands of dollars.

Up and down the shore for almost 30 miles is a path of wrecked vacation spots. Inland along the same line lay ruined tobacco and corn crops. No loss of life was reported.

North Beach Bears Brunt

North Beach suffered most. Here more than 70 summer cottages were damaged, four demolished, a pier and dance hall destroyed.

At Chesapeake Beach, a $15,000 pier extending half a mile into the bay with a miniature railway, was washed away by 12-foot waves. The locomotive and coaches, long a novelty at the beach, were plunged into the water. Selinger's Crab House on another pier was carried more than half a mile into the marshes.

At Plum Point, the greatest damage was to yachts and smaller boats. More than 50 were destroyed. One was a 40-foot cabin ship, belonging to Sam Peach.

Fishermen Loose Boats

Fishermen's boats at Old Plum Point went with the storm. Many fishermen were without crafts.

Through this section, farmers had raised their finest tobacco crops in history. The rains beat it down, along with hundreds of acres of corn. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

At many of the resorts, milk and bread wagons from Washington and Baltimore were unable to move.

automobile into the water and he, too, was carried away by its force.

A woman and a boy were drowned near Baltimore when they attempted to flee from flooded Muller Island in a small rowboat.

At Bear Creek, near Baltimore, an unidentified man was swept away by the high waters. In Carroll County a motorist lost his life in another evening when he was swept away by the rising tide.

Two engineers lost their lives when the crack Southern Railway Crescent Limited plunged into the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River at Takoma, Md.

Winds Move Northward

The hurricane winds that lashed the Virginia coastline moved northward, leaving $3,000,000 in wreckage and a death toll of at least 12 lives.

Storm and flood took heavy toll at Norfolk, where estimates placed the damage at $2,000,000, and at Virginia Beach, fashionable seaside resort, $1,000,000 worth of property lay strewn along the sands.

Coast Guard craft after two days and nights of battling towering seas scoured the waters off the Virginia Capes, where waves still rolled high.

Although the storm centered in the Cape Henry-Norfolk-Virginia Beach area, damage was considerable along the entire distance of the Virginia Coast. At Newport News property was damaged to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Army posts at Langley Field and Fort Monroe felt the force of the blow and northward up the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River to Quantico, and beyond wreckage lined the shore, piers were swept away and bridges inundated.

Virginia Crop Damage

From agricultural tidewater, Virginia came reports of damage to crops in the field that aggregated other hundreds of thousands of dollars. In the lowlands the damage was particularly severe.

New York City, braced for the blow last night, escaped without severe property loss, the storm having struck a glancing blow at the metropolis as it whirled its way toward the upper St. Lawrence Valley.

The village of Fleischmann, N. Y., in the Catskills, was threatened with a deluge from swollen Switzerland Lake. The resort has a summer population of 800.

Pennsylvania today surveyed a loss of at least eight lives and millions of dollars of property damage. While the intensity of the storm lessened somewhat during the forenoon—and Philadelphia even saw the sun—rivers continued to rise, still blocking railroads, rendering scores of families homeless, and doing irreparable damage to crops.

York estimated damage as high as $3,000,000; several hundred steel mill workers were thrown out of work when flood waters caused closing of shops in Coatesville; two score plants had to be closed in Reading.

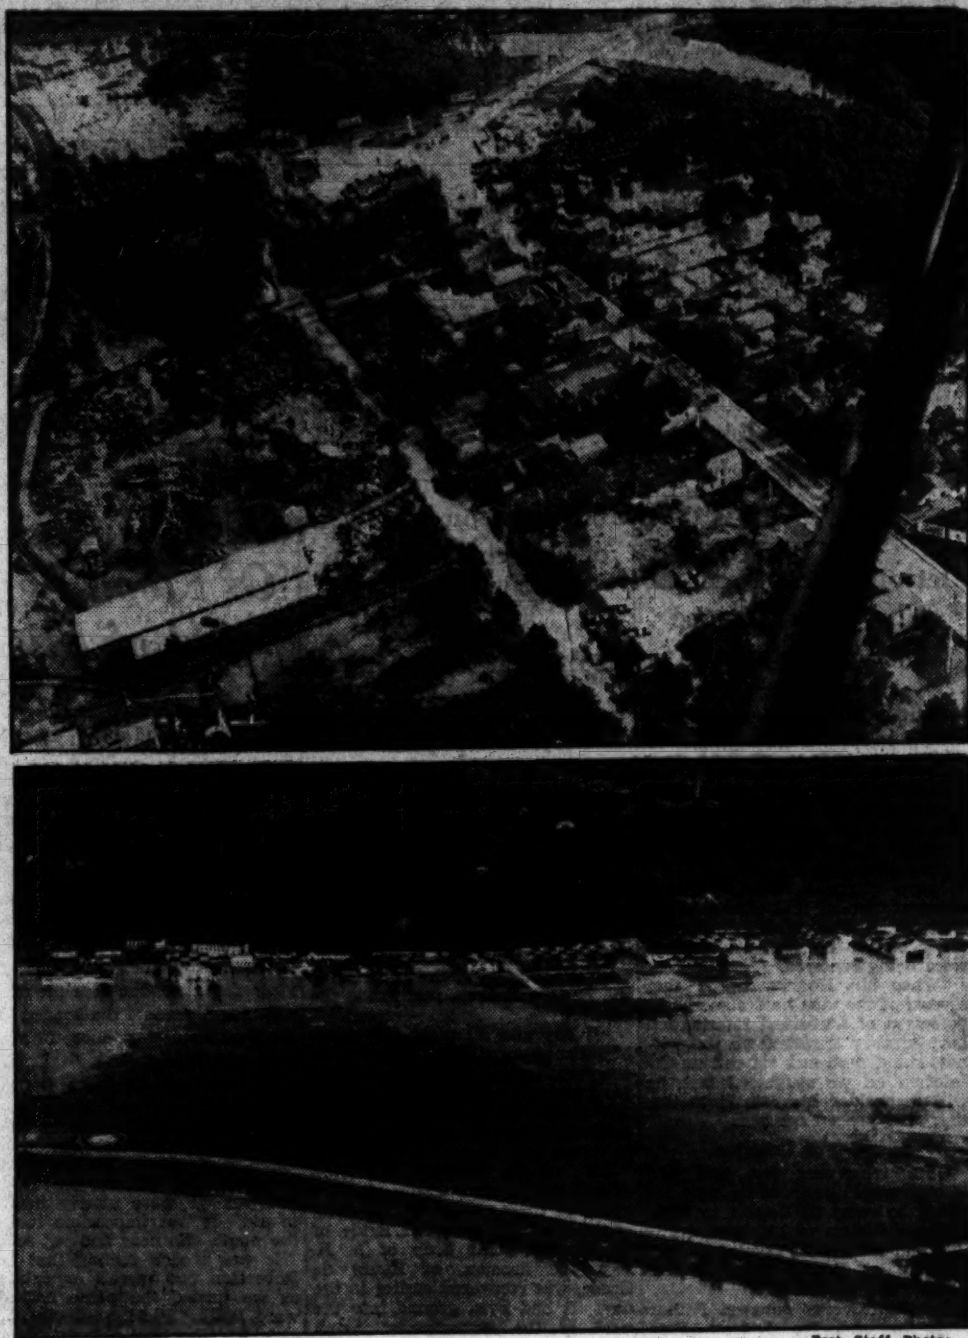

U. S. Airlines Hire More Than in '32

American-operated airlines employed 5,997 persons as of July 1, according to figures compiled by the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce.

Of these, 575 were pilots, 192 copilots, 2,236 mechanics, 1,618 hangar and field employees and 1,381 office and traffic solicitation personnel. These figures include foreign extensions of domestic airlines. The figures at the same date in 1932 were about 500 less.

Airlines consumed 12,589,547 gallons of gasoline during the first half of 1933, and 470,184 gallons of oil. There were 38 fewer planes in service at the end of the 1933 period than at the end of the same period in 1932, but gasoline and oil consumption was greater.

Nearby Flood Damage Pictured by Air Photographer

Uprooted Tree Rips Dam, Pike Damaged

A 20-foot section of the Colesville pike was swept away early yesterday when the wooden superstructure on the dam at Burnt Mills, Md., was battered down by an uprooted tree.

The waters swept past the pumping station of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and undermined the roadway. Repair work was started at once. A bridge on the Rams Horn road near the District Line was swept away.

Riverdale Man Replacing Bulb Is Electrocuted

Drowning Also Reported as Prince Georges Counts Damage.

Two deaths had been reported last night as Prince Georges County slowly began to emerge from the flood. Waters which had driven hundreds of persons from their homes receded and residents began to check losses.

The dead: Joseph McReynolds, 49, of Taylor road, Riverdale, Md.; Frank Mason, 35, colored, of Bladensburg, Md.

McReynolds was killed when he went into the water-filled cellar of his home to replace a light bulb. Four feet of water in which he was standing provided a ground and he was electrocuted. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Martin Keane, of Riverdale.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sadie McReynolds; two sons, Hugh William McReynolds, 20, and Herbert McReynolds, 8, and a daughter, Josephine McReynolds, 14. The body was removed to the Gasch undertaking establishment at Hyattsville.

Mason was drowned in the swollen waters of the Eastern Branch near the Bladensburg Jail. Swept from his feet, the man was carried away by the current before he could grasp a rope thrown him by Thomas Latimer, a volunteer fireman. The body was recovered yesterday.

Four persons were rescued yesterday from the wholesale beer establishment of Carl Blanchard, near Peace Cross, Bladensburg. Blanchard and a girl clerk were trapped in the building by the rising waters. Will Perry, of the Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department, swung hand-over-hand over an electric light wire to the house followed by another member of the department. Other firemen were unable to get them off. A boat was brought from the Washington Navy Yard, manned by eight sailors, who rowed to the house and removed the quartet.

One unidentified colored man nearly was caught like a rat in a trap in the Bladensburg Jail. As the waters began to rise, it was remembered he had been locked up. W. R. Beattie, president of the board of town commissioners, waded to the jail and released the man on his personal bond and set him to work rescuing other persons.

Mr. Beattie estimated that the damage in Bladensburg will amount to nearly $100,000.

Riverdale volunteer firemen rescued more than 50 persons from flooded homes. About 20 were brought out in a truck loaned by Hugh A. Barron. The remainder was rescued in boats and by means of ropes. Several narrow escapes from being swept away by the swift current were experienced by the firemen.

Senator's Aid, 2 U. S. Officials Rescued From Tree in Flood

All Exhausted When Taken to Frederick; One Tells How They Prayed.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 24 (Sp.). Rescued at the point of exhaustion after clinging four hours to top branches of a willow tree on Liberty road, 11 miles northwest of this city, Paul Sample, secretary to Senator Frederick Van Nuys, of Indiana; Will G. Beardslee, special assistant to the Attorney General, and O. T. Englehart, attorney in the Veterans' Administration, Washington, were recovering today from their harrowing experience.

Sample and Englehart owe their lives to Beardslee, who swam from point to point until he reached a farmhouse, from where he telephoned police here for help.

Water Bails Firemen

Firemen attempted to reach the men, but the water backed from Monocacy River and several large creeks was too deep for the men to wade to pass through. Raife Kline and Robert F. Nicodemus, well-known local swimmers, piloted a canoe to the tree and rescued Sample and Englehart as the water, 18 feet deep, was within 2 feet of the exhausted men. The men were brought to the Francis Scott Key Hotel.

Sample, Beardslee and Englehart were supper guests of a friend near Liberty last night. Returning about midnight they encountered high water on the road near the Israel Creek Bridge. They attempted to pass but its depth stranded the machine. Beardslee walked ahead but soon found himself surrounded by rushing water. He made his way back to the car, by then partly submerged. Sample, unable to swim, and Englehart got out of the car and, in water almost to their waist, the three made their way to the willow tree.

"We Prayed," Sample Says

The water continued to rise until the surrounding fields were covered with rushing waters.

"It was a close call, and we did not know whether we would get through or not," Sample said. "It was certainly a time to pray and we did. We owe everything to Beardslee. That canoe that pulled up to the tree looked like a Noah's Ark."

An hour later the tree from which the men were rescued submerged. No trace of the automobile has been found.

Coal Groups End Battle To Combine on NRA Code

ers, was understood to have helped with a conciliatory speech to the Southern operators, few of whom ever before had set down to confer with labor union officers. Differentials for producing sections were not discussed, but will be taken up later. Subcommittees are to consider the various problems. They will report to the full committee and findings will be included in a general code.

How soon final agreement will be reached could not be forecast, but Gen. Johnson said that he was less bothered about speed than getting the task done in a satisfactory manner.

Charles O'Neill, central Pennsylvania; J. D. A. Morrow, western Pennsylvania; R. E. Taggart and D. C. Kennedy, representing the smokeless Appalachian or Southern operators; Van A. Bittner, Mr. Lewis, Philip Murray and Thomas Kennedy, representing the United Mine Workers, were named a subcommittee to study hours and wages.

Confer on Labor Disputes

Meanwhile the actual labor board moved to settle actual and threatened labor disagreements in the industry. Representatives of the board already are in Pennsylvania investigating disputes and the board yesterday sent Dr. Elmer F. Andrews into the Kentucky and West Virginia fields. Trouble arose there over the effort of union leaders to organize the heretofore anti-union field.

Mr. Lewis' organization, grasping the opportunity afforded by the recovery law to increase union strength, is said to have gone through the fields telling miners the law would prohibit their employment unless they joined the unions. Recovery officials have flatly denied these assertions as they have also denied counter activities of open-shop operators.

Apparently Little Progress Was made toward agreement on a code for the automobile industry. Manufacturers sought another "bargaining" provision, with the words "open shop" stricken out. They tried to have the open shop expressed in other words. They failed to get approval of various alternatives and there the situation rested when conferences adjourned until today.

Having secured codes for most of the major industries, the Recovery Administration apparently is willing to let both the coal and automobile codes go along for awhile without pressure.

Officials are aware that behind the automobile companies are interests reaching into the financial nerve centers of the Nation, which can play a major part in the recovery program through influence in many industries and banking circles. The administration is angling for easier credit to keep the recovery ball rolling.

More Industries in Line

Eleven more industries were brought under the recovery banner through approval of temporary modifications of the President's employment agreement. The industries included flat glass distributing, flavoring extracts, soda water flavors, baking powder, county grain elevators, paper distributing, sewing machine, earthenware manufacturing, men's neckwear, washing and ironing machines and feed manufacturing.

Tentative Code For Retailers Given Johnson

Factions Disagree Over Proposed Price and Advertising Control.

(Associated Press.)

A new tentative code for the retail trades calling for a work week of from 40 to 48 hours and minimum wages ranging from $10 to $15 was offered to the Recovery Administration last night by the industry's drafting committee.

The committee went into executive session late in the day following extensive hearings before a deputy administrator at which representatives of different factions of the industry disagreed over proposed price and advertising regulation.

The code had not been approved by all of the representatives of the various groups, several of whom requested longer work hours. Other important factions opposed new and stringent clauses banning many so-called unfair trade practices.

Describes False Advertising

The code made sets out to describe false advertising claims which would be no longer permissible; retains a clause to prevent the sale of goods below cost; and definitely forbids the advertising claim by a store that it generally undersells competitors.

The new labor provisions provided that stores operating 52 hours or less would work employees 40 hours per week; stores operating between 56 and 60 hours per week would work employees 44 hours per week; and that those operating more than 63 hours might work employees no more than 48.

A 48-hour week was set for maintenance and delivery employees, with time and one-third for overtime, and all executives receiving more than $30 per week were exempted from the hourly provisions, as were outside salesmen.

Minimum wages were set as follows: In cities over 500,000 population, $14 for 40 hours; $14.50 for 44 hours, and $15 for 48 hours. In cities of from 100,000 to 500,000, $13 for 40 hours; $13.50 for 44 hours; $14 for 48 hours.

In cities from 25,000 to 100,000, $12 for 40 hours; $12.50 for 44 hours, and $13 for 48 hours.

In smaller towns and cities provisions for a 30 per cent increase in wages were made so that the minimum would be $10.

Family Stores Exempt

Asking for questions from the floor, Deputy Administrator A. D. Whitelaw heard A. H. Goodman, representing a group of St. Louis neighborhood stores, object that the code provided no limitation of family operated stores employing no help as compared to neighborhood stores which were employers.

It was indicated that difficulties remaining to be settled would be smoothed out within the next few days and that the code would be ready for President Roosevelt's signing some time next week, probably by Wednesday.

Turkey Waifs

Four Saved From Wreck Provided For by 3 Samaritans.

Four waifs of the Crescent Limited, speed train of the Pennsylvania Lines from New York to New Orleans, which was wrecked yesterday morning, have a home.

The waifs are 4 pedigreed turkeys, survivors of 24 shipped to Mrs. Michael V. O'Connor, Newport avenue and River road, Bethesda, Md., Wednesday from a hatchery at Mount Airy, Md.

Twenty died in the wreck at the Eastern Branch trestle near Washington.

Three Samaritans are going to provide for the four survivors. They are C. W. Masonheimer, District policeman, No. 771; Joseph M. McInerney, of 1424 W. street, northwest; R. R. Padgett, District policeman, No. 741, who lives in Barney Heights, Va.

"I'm going to make pets of mine," said Padgett, as he left the wreck, cuddling a downy turkey under each arm.

"I just hope it lives, because it should be a pretty good bird when it's old enough to eat," chuckled McInerney.

Train Kills Mother Of Capital Resident

Mrs. Emma Owens, 79, of Crawford, W. Va., Is Victim.

Weston, W. Va., Aug. 24 (Sp.). The body of Mrs. Emma Owens, 79, of Crawford community, was found on the tracks of the Coal & Coke Railroad late last night after she had been hit by an engine passing her home. She had apparently tried to cross in front of the train. There will be no inquest.

Mrs. Owens was the wife of James A. Owens, prominent merchant of the community, and the mother of Frank Owens, Washington, D. C., former employee of the Veterans Bureau in that city.

Other survivors are three sons and three sisters. Interment will be Sunday afternoon in the Post Cemetery near the home.

Reserve Banks Move to Force Loans to Trade

Open Market Operations Expanded in Effort to Help Business.

(Associated Press.)

An increase in "open market" operations by the Federal Reserve System in an effort to force credit into business and industry was disclosed yesterday by a report showing the central banks purchased $35,000,000 in Government securities during the week ended Wednesday.

Federal Reserve officials said the purchases were to provide ample funds for commercial banks to encourage them in extension of credit facilities to commerce.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson conferred recently with Federal Reserve officials in an effort to liberalize credit conditions, but there was no indication in Reserve quarters yesterday this had any connection with last week's purchases.

All Banks Cooperating

The procedure known as the "open market policy" operates on the theory that the money paid for the Government securities will be deposited in banks, and thus encourage them to extend more credit to channels of trade.

Concerted action on the part of the twelve Federal Reserve banks comprising the system was indicated in a comparison of purchases of Government securities over the last two weeks as revealed in yesterday's weekly condition statement.

While this method of credit expansion has been resorted to on at least two previous occasions by the Reserve banks, both of which failed to produce the desired results, there was said to be good reason to believe the present movement would be successful if carried out to any marked degree.

Success Is Foreseen

This belief was based on the elimination of at least two factors that existed previously, and which tended to nullify any attempt on the part of the Reserve system to bring about credit expansion. These factors were the heavy exports of gold, now prohibited, and member bank borrowings from their regional institutions.

Previously the proceeds from open-market operations were not being used in an expansion of credit, but rather were utilized by member banks to pay off their indebtedness to regional institutions and in the building up of their balance sheets.

Member bank balances with Reserve banks are now heavily excessive, it was said, hence there was no expectation that proceeds would be used to augment this already more than sufficient account.

Thomas Asks Action

Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, champion of currency issuance to help solve economic troubles, in a letter told Eugene R. Black, governor, the Federal Reserve Board showed no indication it was "ready to cooperate to save the situation."

The senator's letter was in answer to a message from Black saying the recent decline in money in circulation was because of return from hoarding.

Flood Wrecks Many Boats in Capital Waters

Rover and Family Hitch-Hike on Flight From Storm-Hit Cottage.

Flood waters of the Potomac were receding gradually yesterday, leaving behind scores of broken and stove-in boats, damaged boat houses and docks.

Hundreds of owners were attempting salvage of craft ranging from rowboats to yachts and bug-eyes. Damage was estimated in the thousands.

Four yachts were sunk at the Corinthian Yacht Club, two score or more rowboats sank and other craft were damaged, the club suffering severely. Havoc was spread at Little Harbor.

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover and his wife and three children were among those who escaped the ravages of wind and rain in southern Maryland. Mr. Rover and his family were at Point Lookout in a cottage owned by Cornelius Doherty, a lawyer.

When the storm slightly abated, the family left, and, with the roads washed out, took a boat to Scotland Beach. From there they hitch-hiked 25 miles to Leonardtown, Md., and telephoned to Washington for automobiles.

Priest Dies in Rescue.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The coastal storm "blew out" the Statue of Liberty's torch last night. A flash of lightning disrupted the electric system of Fort Wood, on Bedloe's Island, and for several hours Miss Liberty's torch, "enlightening the world," was in darkness.

Mount Tremper, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—Father James Healey, New York, Catholic priest, was believed drowned today while rescuing three women tourists and two children in the flood waters of Esopus Creek.

When a breeches buoy failed to reach the women, Father Healey and another man jumped in a boat. It overturned and the priest disappeared.

Amarillo, Tex., Aug. 24 (AP).—A tornado ripped through the town of Claude, near here, late today.

First reports from the town indicated the storm had caused much damage.

Liberty Limited Delayed.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 24 (AP).—The Liberty Limited, fast Pennsylvania Railroad Washington-Chicago passenger train, delayed by a washout near York, Pa., was awaited here today. The train's schedule called for arrival in Pittsburgh last midnight.

Fleischmanns, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—The water level in Lake Zurich, Switzerland, which rose dangerously behind Switzerland Dam today, menacing this Catskill Mountain village, began to recede slowly late today. Mayor A. H. Todd said he believed that unless more rain fell the dam would be safe.

Marcus Hook, Pa., Aug. 24 (AP).—High waves in the Delaware River last night destroyed the Quarantine Station wharf here, but left standing the Maritime Exchange's observation house on the tip of the pier, where a man was on duty at the time.

The service's wire to the Delaware Breakwater was down, disrupting the reporting of ship movements.

Prisoner Bails Self Out.

While waters were rising to unprecedented heights in Bladensburg, someone remembered a colored prisoner locked in the city jail.

Officials rushed to the jail to find over a foot of water in the cell and the prisoner perched on his cot. He was released on condition he aid in rescue efforts, and worked with such diligence that authorities were considering paroling him.

Coast Guard reports last night said Mrs. Ellen S. Adams, 1512 K street northwest, on a tugboat vacation trip from New York to Norfolk, Va., was safe at Lewes, Del.

Mrs. Adams was making the trip with her sisters when the tug was caught in the coastal storm. It took refuge and rode out the gale at Lewes. The craft was without radio.

Damage at stricken Ocean City, Md., had an encouraging aspect. For some time agitation had been under way to have a $1,000,000 inlet cut across the main island. Attempts to obtain a Federal grant for the work were being made. The storm cut three such inlets.

The Naval Academy at Annapolis and the Navy experimental station across the Severn River had their share of the storm damage. The pier that runs out to the historic ships, Reina Mercedes and the Cumberland, was ripped up. Upward of $5,000 damage was done to this pier alone.

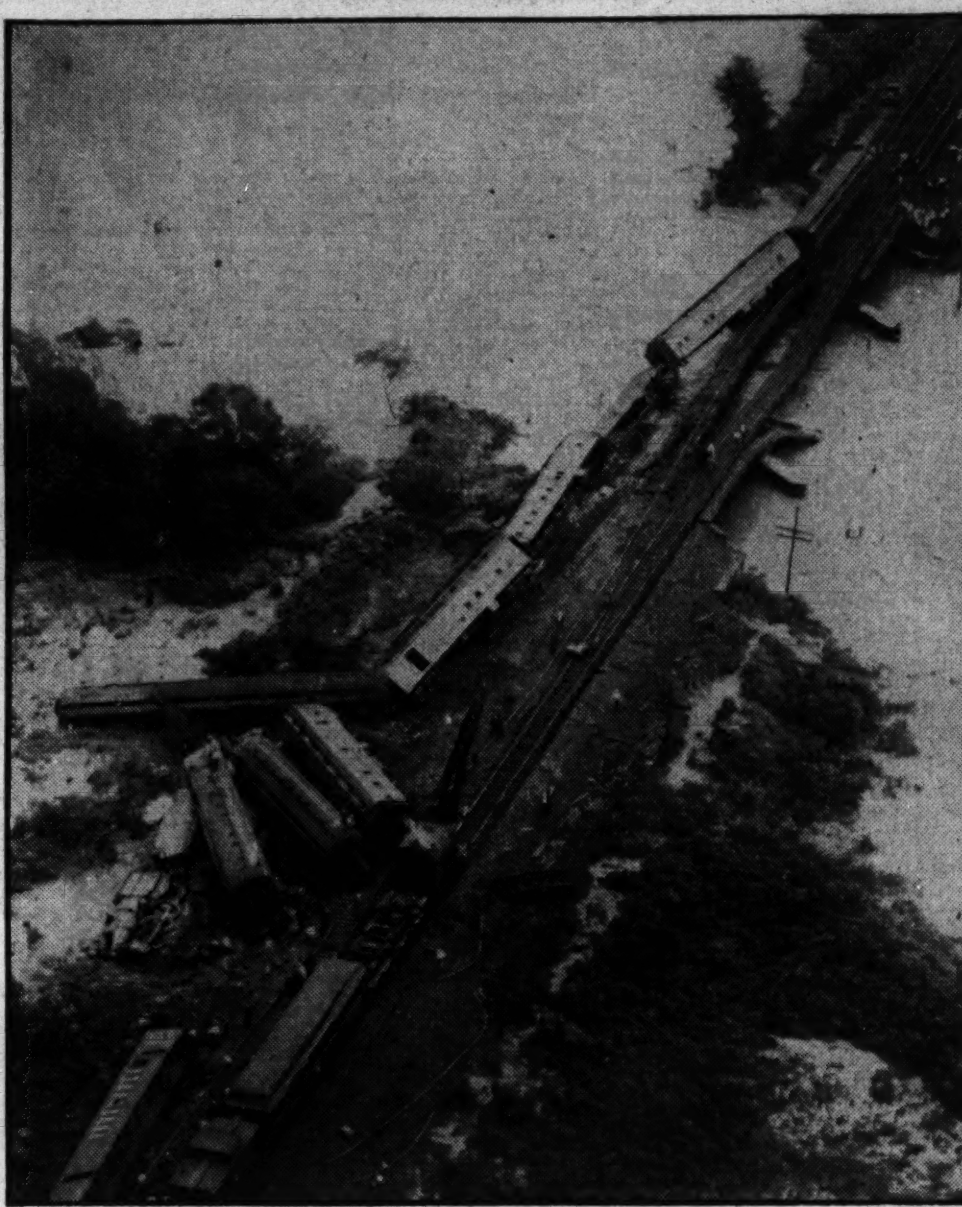

(Associated Press.)

Former Representative Leonidas C. Dyer (Republican), Missouri, had to swim several hundred yards during the storm when his cottage at Scotland Beach, Md., was washed away. He was finally rescued by men in a rowboat, who had taken his family to safety.

Police Thwart Meeting Of Irish Guard Group

Catford, Irish Free State, Aug. 24 (AP).—A detail of 200 police tonight seized possession of the Town Hall here and prevented a meeting of the National Guard Association, affiliated with the Blue Shirts, headed by Gen. Owen O'Duffy. The general was scheduled to speak.

What Remains of Wrecked Train at Anacostia River

An airman's view of the wrecked Crescent Limited, Pennsylvania train, which leaped from the tracks while passing over a trestle weakened by Wednesday's wind and the swollen Anacostia River. The engine can be seen at the left almost buried in the soft mud into which it was flung with tremendous force.

Wreck Victim Arrives Here In His Pajamas

Prominent Louisiana Man Tells of Clambering From Berth.

Wearing pajamas, a jacket fashioned from a pillow case and a topcoat, a man slipped quietly through a side entrance of the Mayflower Hotel early yesterday morning.

To a startled room clerk he explained he was A. P. Tugwell, of Baton Rouge, chairman of the Louisiana State Highway Commission; that he had lost his clothes and baggage in the wreck of the Crescent Limited about an hour earlier.

"How any of us got out alive is more than I can understand," he said. "I was in the coach that broke through the trestle and dropped into the water. My first recollection is of standing on the window in my berth, hanging to the curtain rod. The man from the opposite berth was struggling beside me in the water."

"We could hear the water roaring all about. It got as high as our waists. The car seemed to be moving through the water. Finally it stopped. The coach was on its side. The only light I could see came from the window in the berth across the way, now over our heads."

"The man who was with me seemed to be hurt. We decided that if we kept our heads we might be able to get out. We didn't know whether the car was covered with water. We tapped the window and felt around it for water. Then we decided to let the porter open it."

"The man who was hurt crawled through first. Others followed. They had to help me because my hand was cut so that I couldn't hold onto anything."

Tugwell was taken to Emergency Hospital, where the hand was dressed. During the day his ticket and one bag were recovered.

Clambered Over Baggage. Ike Pickens, en route from New York to his home in Clarksdale, Miss., awoke to find his, the fourth, coach lying on its side.

"I thought it was all over for me," he said yesterday in his room at the Willard Hotel. "The six persons who were riding in my car clambered over the heaps of bedding, baggage and cushions in the roof of the car and climbed out through a window."

"Some one went back into the car to carry out the one woman passenger, who was unable to get out. I was so dazed I can hardly remember how I got onto the rescue train sent out to take back the dead and injured."

Mr. Pickens received bruises on the legs and body.

Evil Omen

New York Jurist's Portrait Crashes, Then He Is Found Dead.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Some time early this morning a large portrait of Henry G. Ward, former presiding justice of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, fell with a crash from the wall in the court's chambers.

A few hours later Judge Ward was found dead, lying face downward in a bathtub, half-filled with water, at the country home of a nephew at Shelter Island, N. Y. A coroner's investigation resulted in the decision that the 83-year-old jurist had died accidentally. It is presumed that he slipped and fell into the tub.

Fish Story? Not This One!

Reporter Tells of Devastation Encountered on Day's Trip Throughout Bay Resorts; Finds Destruction Everywhere.

By Jean Monk.

Left Washington early yesterday morning, via Benning and Central avenues, for fishing points on the Chesapeake Bay. Ten miles out, turned right at Largo, 2 miles to Western Branch; road under 18 inches of water. Man, in hip boots, with horse and wagon standing by. He nodded to motorist ahead of me an O. K. I asked; he said yes.

Five miles to Marlboro, Bridge, just out of city, under 2 feet of water. Many motorists crossing, each one stalling midstream. Group of boys, some in bathing suits, having great time pushing stalled cars to safety.

Railroad Inundated.

Below railroad, water 6 feet deep over road. Automobile abandoned Wednesday almost completely submerged. Six inches of top showing; three boys in bathing suits having great time atop this abandoned car. Back to Western Branch; motorist just crossed with stalled machine. Man with wagon pulled him across. I ventured safely. Motorist on other side stalled; man in hip boots pulled him out. Old Dobbin made his feed today.

To Largo, right on Central avenue to Crane highway, back to Marlboro; thence to Patuxent River. New bridge safe. Road beyond, over the flat, for 500 yards under 24 inches of water. Many cars crossing safely; State roads truck standing by to give assistance; many colored men helping. Few cars stalled. Ford roadster pushing big District of Columbia sedan to safety.

Mud Covers Luncheon.

Mt. Zion to Galesville: Capt. John Smith digging into mud covering luncheon and recreation hall; four feet of water just receded. Many small boats washed ashore; no damage to fishing boats.

Talked with Capt. Howard Harge, Capt. Noah Hazard's right-hand helper. Said Capt. Noah will run fishing parties hereafter from home pier, Galesville.

Around to Shady Side. Ran through 12 inches of water at turn to Cedarhurst. That $10,000 sea-wall Cedarhurst built by private subscription, standing like a Stone-wall Jackson.

Capt. R. E. Lee's boats, Shady Side, not damaged; nor Capt. George Proctor's. Eighty-year-old residents say this was worst "tide" in their time. One fisherman at this place lost $6,000 worth of nets he had just staked out and $250 worth of net poles. Fishing party last Wednesday caught, off Bloody Point, 30 croakers and an 8-pound bluefish in one of Capt. Lee's boats.

Fish Jumps Right In.

To Herring Bay, pride of harbors of the upper bay. More than 100 fishing boats safe. Capt. Noah Hazard's four fine boats safe here. Gold shark tooth goes this week to Capt. Roy Ward, Herring Bay, for best fishing story. Last Wednesday, returning with party, he steered his boat through a school of bluefish and one of them, a two-pounder, flounced into his boat unassisted. Roy's father says the tidal storm of 1893 was worse than this one.

North Beach, another San Francisco wreck. Capt. Oscar Marshall's big boat went under, but he thinks he can save her. Capt. C. Henry's boat, his only means of livelihood, wet down. The sea wall is demolished. The pier is gone; many small boats beached, damaged, wrecked. The ballroom, a total wreck; back broken, rear end out, floor a mass of splinters. Couldn't cross to Chesapeake Beach. Crabhouse walls and floor took a long voyage to sea; top rests across road in the marsh. Pier is gone, and it took Capt. Noah's luncheon, the little railroad bridge and the little train. The bridge over the canal disappeared.

Capt. Sam Dixon's boat, Plum Point, went under, turned over and the angry waves tore it to pieces; Capt. Dorsey's boat also, they said.

Kenwood Beach in Ruins.

Kenwood Beach in complete ruins; three of Capt. George North's four boats were demolished; two of Capt. Saul Phillips' six boats are no more. But here's heroism: Capt. Clinton Pearson and Capt. George Leonard, refusing to abandon their boats, faced what seemed to be certain death every hour yesterday within 100 yards of the shore. Frantic spectators turned away; men were pale; women wept. Word was spread around in Washington that two boat captains lost their lives at Kenwood Beach.

But these brave young captains remained with their only means of supporting their small families, risking death rather than surrender their boats to destruction—and they won out. We award each of them the diamond shark tooth and salute them as noble Vikings, brave and true.

Anderson's store, at this place, left only part of a wall when it departed. Every shore cottage is demolished. Both piers are gone, all small boats are beached, some lying in ruins, much driftwood, boards and logs are piled high.

Solomons was more scared than hurt. Capt. Harry Woodburn said his store was flooded; so was Capt. Lore's fish house, next door. Webster's store was 4 feet under water, Evans' pavilion was stripped of its movables, including a $60 keg of syrup for cold drinks. The steamboat landing was whipped to pieces. Fishing boats were safe, moored further up the creek, small craft were piled high and dry. On my return I saw a 38-foot cabin cruiser sitting 100 yards from the shore in a pasture.

And so, to home and to bed.

Two Held in Big Bond As Kidnaping Plotters

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 24 (AP).—Two men were held in $25,000 bail each today after State's Attorney Hugh Alcorn told Superior Court Judge Newell Jennings they had plotted to kidnap a Springfield (Mass.) business man for $25,000 ransom.

The men, Ernest Corvo and Mario Campisi, both of Middletown, were charged with conspiracy to kidnap. The name of the intended victim was not disclosed.

NRA Head's Speeches Penned by Own Hand

(Associated Press.)

In these days of "ghost writers" and typewriters, Hugh S. Johnson is something of an anachronism. He writes his own speeches and does it in long hand—about six lines to a page, in a big, sprawling hand. Then he turns it over to his secretary to be deciphered and typed.

The NRA administrator calls upon a variety of sources for material. But in the end it is his speech and his own colorful phrasing that reaches his audience.

Recount Shifts Voting in Long Home Precinct

Court Check in Louisiana Completely Reverses Several Counts.

New Orleans, Aug. 24 (AP).—Discrepancies were found in the ballot boxes of the home precincts of both Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley in today's court recount of the ballots cast on constitutional amendments in last November's election.

Using amendment No. 5 as a test, recount of the Eighteenth Precinct of the Fourteenth Ward, Senator Long's precinct, showed that the amendment was carried by 98 votes instead of 232 as officially reported. The original and official count was given as 269 for and 39 against, while today's recount gave 199 for and 100 against.

The recount completely reversed the vote in the Twelfth Precinct of the Fourteenth Ward. Mayor Walmsley's precinct, the retabulation showing the amendment was defeated by nearly 100 votes instead of being adopted by more than 100 votes as officially reported in November. The official count of the Walmsley precinct was given as 171 for and 68 against, while the recount gave only 59 for and 154 against.

Today's recount showed discrepancies in all 30 boxes. District Attorney Eugene Stanley said that 30 boxes will be counted daily until the vote was checked completely, after which he planned prosecutions.

Thousands Labor On Storm's Debris

the engineer to slow down, and that steam had been cut off. The sagging of the bridge caused the rails to split. The engine left the track, was shoved up the embankment by the force of the cars and was catapulted into the mud, the cab being completely torn away. The mail coaches were hurled further up the track and the next three cars buckled onto the embankment. The two rear cars held firm on the viaduct which settled slowly into the water.

Passengers were saved largely by the fact that they were in Pullman berths, and that they and the colored porters kept their presence of mind. Porters broke windows and helped all to safety. There were various cases of heroism, but a part-time brakeman, named Arthur, displayed the greatest presence of mind, running a mile to a track telephone and reporting the wreck.

Bridge Lately Inspected.

Ambulances from city hospitals and a rescue train were rushed to the scene of the accident. The wounded were hurried to hospitals and the other passengers were taken to the Union Station, where they were given hot foods and dry clothing. Most of the passengers had been forced to flee with only part of their apparel.

Railroad officials insisted last night that the train could not have been exceeding 30 miles an hour at the scene of the accident. They declared that this was considered one of the strongest bridges on their system. It had been inspected 90 minutes before by a track engineer, and only 10 minutes before by a track walker. An average of 72 trains had been passing over it each 24 hours.

Officials gave a rough estimate of the damage as $80,000, but from other sources The Washington Post learned that it probably would be twice or three times that amount.

It is expected that the wrecking crews will have the tracks cleared today, and that the rebuilding of the bridge can be commenced tomorrow. Traffic has been rerouted over freight lines.

During the wrecking operations two men were injured when a crane overturned. They were Nelson Shepp, 32, of York, Pa., who suffered a possible fracture of the left hip, and Daniel Reney, 33, of Baltimore, whose back and shoulder were sprained. Both were employees of the Baltimore Wrecking Co.

Two Other Storm Deaths.

Besides the wreck fatalities, two other deaths resulted in the District from the storm.

C. K. Chapman, 55, of Forestville, Va., died early yesterday morning in Georgetown Hospital from injuries received when he was struck by a falling tree while driving to Leesburg, Va., in search of a nurse for his wife.

William Wade Ashman, 63, of 613 H street northwest, died at Emergency Hospital from injuries he received when he stepped from a street car in front of an automobile.

The Potomac River, the rising of which night before last to unprecedented levels was responsible for a general paralysis of public services within the District, receded yesterday to almost normal. Officials of the police and the Weather Bureau stated late in the evening that high water would come back again with the tide, but that there was little probability of the river rising above its embankments again. Wednesday night's high water, they stated, was due much more to the backing up of the river under the steady east wind than to the heavy rainfall.

Sewer System Adequate.

All day repair men of the electric light and power and telephone companies worked to repair damage and bring service back to normal. From an early hour in the morning street cars were able to resume usual schedules.

The sewage system proved adequate to the abnormal circumstances, according to Sanitary Engineer J. B. Gordon. More than 100 calls for aid in pumping out cessars were received and all but a score were answered before night. Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parking, personally supervised the clearing away of broken trees. Many unemployed men aided with this work.

Chiropractor Jailed On Kidnaping Charge

St. Paul, Aug. 24 (AP).—Dr. W. H. Hedberg, St. Paul chiropractor and center of two mysterious events in which he said he had been attacked, was placed in the city jail today to await a hearing on charge of kidnaping and assault with intent to kill Dr. E. J. Engberg, St. Paul physician.

Hedberg had been held in a hospital since Sunday when he was found in a stupor along a railroad track, apparently under the influence of a drug, according to the police physician.

Weather Aids Fire Fighters

Forest Blazes Are Brought Under Control in Some Oregon Sections.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 24 (AP).—Fog and cooler temperatures today materially aided 2,000 men who for more than a week have battled ravaging forest fires in the Oregon coast mountains west of here.

Fires still burned on thousands of acres of the best virgin timber in the West, but the weather gave new encouragement to fighters.

At various minor points control was reported. The Flora Logging Co. was handling that sector with its own crew. The spot fire on Jordan Creek was burning itself out. The Yamhill country fire near Fairdale was being held by mill crews.

The hottest places were on Wilson River, where for days the most serious fire in Oregon's history had raged uncontrolled, and in the Elk-horn sector of the Trask water shed.

The fire zone lies in the mountain regions between Tillamook and Washington Counties.

Texas Votes Tomorrow On Repeal; Interest Lags

Austin, Tex., Aug. 24 (AP).—Texans tonight were preparing to write this State's decision on repeal of the eighteenth amendment with their ballots in Saturday's special election.

Last-minute appeals were being made by prohibition and antiprohibition speakers, rounding out what has been a rather dull campaign in which the public has manifested only slightly more than passing interest.

30,000 MILES
without carbon removal

It is not unusual for users of Betholine to drive 30,000 to 40,000 miles without having carbon removed. Betholine is blended with benzol—a costly ingredient that retards the formation of carbon and gives smoother engine performance. For years Betholine cost 5c more than regular gasolines. Today you can buy it for only 3c more per gallon. And it still contains the same amount of costly benzol!

Ship's Officers Laud Bravery Of Passengers

No Hysteria on Madison, Battered by Waves Off Virginia Capes.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 24 (P).—Officers of the liner Madison told today how her 37 passengers remained free of hysteria while S. O. S. calls were being sent out from the ship, storm-battered and damaged by a giant wave 20 miles outside the Virginia capes.

They passed over lightly a tale of the heroism and seamanship of captain and crew which brought the liner here this morning under her own power.

A forward deckhouse missing, gaping holes in the wall of the promenade deck and lifeboats swept from their fastenings gave mute evidence of the storm's force. So did the haggard faces of the approximately 90 persons on board.

Two members of the crew—Second Mate Lycurgus Lawrence and Quartermaster Edward Corbett—were swept overboard and lost and two others—Malachi Nelson and Robert Turner—suffered broken bones.

As soon as the ship docked Capt. W. S. Heath slipped away amid the rousing cheers of passengers who credited his ability with saving their lives.

Survives Many Perils.

The Madison, in her twenty-two years coastal service, has been rammed, run aground, caught in a submarine net and attacked by fire.

In 1912 she was rammed by a fruit steamer near Lambert's Point, Va., and a hole torn in her side. She was turned toward shore at full speed, and grounded in the mud.

In 1917, she was caught in the great steel submarine net stretched across the entrance to Hampton Roads.

Later she went aground near Norfolk, Va., during a dense fog. In 1928, she caught fire as she was preparing to dock in New York.

Tugs Race to Steamer.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 24 (P).—The towing tugs Peerless and Restless were speeding this afternoon to aid the steamer City of Norfolk, aground in Poconoke Sound.

News of the vessel's safety was received here by wireless from a plane assisting the Coast Guard in search for the craft, missing since Tuesday night.

Officials of the steamship company here said the 40 passengers aboard either would be brought to Norfolk tonight by one of the tugs, or taken off early tomorrow morning.

Solarina Safe in Storm.

Wilmington, N. C., Aug. 24 (P).—A wireless message received by the Coast Guard cutter Modoc today from the Pamlico said the motor ship Solarina, feared lost in the storm that swept the South Atlantic Coast yesterday, has put in at Winyah Bay, S. C., and is safe.

Roosevelt, Phoning, Learns White House Elms Are Safe

President Roosevelt, an ardent forest lover, showed himself equally interested in individual trees by his anxiety for the elms on the White House lawn yesterday.

Early in the morning, at the request of the President, Mrs. Roosevelt telephoned to the White House from Hyde Park to learn if the White House trees had suffered in Wednesday's storm. He was pleased to learn that no serious damage had been done to them.

Incidentally, another President's interest in the White House trees is responsible for the winter fuel supply for the White House fireplaces.

According to Ike Hoover, White House chief usher for many years, President Wilson once observed fallen trees being chopped up after a storm had visited the Executive Mansion.

"What do they do with that wood?" Wilson asked.

"Oh, chop it up and cart it away," was the answer.

"They wouldn't do that in Europe!" Wilson commented. "Tell them to chop it into fireplace lengths and we'll burn it in the White House this winter." And ever after that, so the story goes, fallen trees in Federal parks have been used to feed the open fireplaces in Government buildings.

As a matter of fact, park officials say, the fallen trees are turned over to the Municipal Wood Yard, to be cut up by men paid out of unemployment funds. The wood is given to needy families.

Stabilized Money World's Big Need

Pacific Relations Delegate Stress Exchange; Say Accord Due Soon.

Banff, Alta., Aug. 24 (P).—Exchange stabilization is one of the most important problems facing the world, Chinese members declared today at round-table discussions in the Institute of Pacific Relations.

They pointed out that tariffs, in the present state of the world, comprise only one aspect of a larger problem in which exchange stabilization looms the largest.

British members, while expressing the opinion that it was highly probable the United States dollar would be further depreciated, held the view it would be possible for the leading trade countries of the world to get together on a currency stabilization program within the next year.

Review Crowns Japanese Fleet War Activities

American Officers Witness Huge Parade of Ships With Emperor.

Yokohama (Friday), Aug. 25 (U.P.).—Emperor Hirohito, supreme commander of one of the most modern war machines on earth, today reviewed the imperial Japanese navy in final maneuvers of the annual war games.

More than 1,000,000 of Hirohito's subjects, packed and crowded in all possible vantage points, saw the navy pass in review before the slender, erect ruler. The 180 war planes flew overhead.

The emperor, a slight, bespectacled youth in his early 30's, has been with the fleet for several days, having joined the warships for the last week or 10 days of the games, held this year over a great area in the Oriental Pacific, between the Japanese islands and the Philippines.

The foreign naval officers were given a place of honor at the parade. The United States was represented by Capt. Isaac Johnson, with his aid, Lieut. Henry Smith-Hutton, aboard the emperor's flagship.

AS the second week of balloting nears a close, Miss Beulah Myles, of Veterans' Administration, is leading Miss Janet L. Stevens, Agriculture, by 25 votes. Honeymoon Vacation.
Bureau of Customs employees thought Miss Luella M. Brassard was on a vacation trip, but a friend in the office received accounts of a beautiful wedding at the home of her parents on Leach Lake, Walker, Minn. She was married yesterday to George E. Votava. They will live in Washington.

Girth, and lots of it, is a part of James J. Hammond, congenial auditor in Treasury. He measures 59 inches midriff.

WE never fail to identify one certain brand of smile. When we saw the beaming face of Wells Ludlow yesterday in the Insolvent Banks office, Treasury, we inquired:

"A new baby at your house?"
"Sure! A seven-pound girl. Mother and daughter doing nicely. But, who told you?"
"Well, only a finder of a million dollars or a new father wears a smile like yours."

MEMBERS of the newly formed Federal Bridge League will meet informally tonight at the clubhouse, 1515 Sixteenth street northwest, M. J. Travland (*), president, announces. The league is under auspices of the Federal News.

Checker Tournament.

Pairings in the second round of the Federal Checker Tournament last night were:
E. C. Dietrich, Treasury, vs. J. E. O'Connell, Agriculture
J. K. Shelton, Internal Revenue, vs. H. A. Franklin, City Postoffice
J. E. Corey, Agriculture, vs. O. M. Barker, G. A. O.
C. A. Cram, War, vs. T. E. Stackhouse, Treasury.

Men are almost as dumb as women, we are convinced. Women wear clothes that freeze them in winter and men wear coats that roast them in summer.

More About the Weather.

Conditions in Claims Division, Veterans' Administration, will never be the same until Ferdie Moreno gets the roof on his house finished. He's ill again with a cold. Here's hoping the weather stays clear so he can complete the job.

WE hope Miss Emma Scott and Miss Grace McIver took along their furs when they set out for Canada this week in Miss Scott's car. "Wish you were here" cards already are being received at Insurance Section, Veterans' Administration.

Bridge, chess and checker players are invited to apply for membership in one of the three clubs at Federal Clubhouse. Applications should be mailed to J. Earle Moser, 10 B street southwest.

Czech Zionists Clash During Praha Session

Delegates Seek Relaxed American Laws for Nazi Victims.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 24 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Disorders broke out tonight in the lounge of the hall of the Praha City Council, where the eighteenth Zionist congress is in session, when an unidentified person shoved the wife of Vladimir Jabotinsky, revisionist leader, as the couple chatted.

Revisionists are the right-wing militant Zionists.

Immediately those in the lounge divided into two camps. They clashed as shouts in praise and abuse of Jabotinsky were raised. Police soon restored order and locked the gates of the lounge after clearing it.

The disorder did not penetrate to the congress hall, where the night session got under way after many delays.

An appeal for a relaxation of American immigration laws because of the German situation was made by Dr. Arthur Ruppin, agricultural and colonization expert for the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

He also asked that at least 50,000 German Jews be placed by the League of Nations in countries outside of Palestine.

Dr. Nahum Sokolow, president of the World Zionist Organization, said that the necessity for the creation of a Jewish national home was demonstrated by "the fate of the German Jews."

Apology Is Demanded.

Warsaw, Aug. 24 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Unless David Ben-Gurion, Zionist labor leader, apologizes to the Brith Hachal (militant revisionist organization) for remarks they consider derogatory to the organization at the Eighteenth World Zionist Congress, at Praha, a committee will proceed there to deal with him "in military fashion."

Baths Opened to Jews.

Berlin, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—An order issued last Saturday barring Jews from the public baths at Wannsee, the largest in the country, was rescinded today. The reason for the change, a communiqué explained, was "because it was not made by a competent authority."

Purse and $20 Stolen in Office.

A purse belonging to Miss Sue S. White, employed at 1061 National Press building, was stolen from her office yesterday, police reported. The purse contained $20.

Opera Conductor Hasselmans, Weds

Atlanta Girl Is Bride of Metropolitan Opera Music Leader.

Atlanta, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Louis Hasselmans, a conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York, and Miss Frances Stephens, of Atlanta, were married here today at the home of the bride.

After a wedding trip they will be at home at 16 Fifth avenue, New York City. In October they will go to Paris, where Mr. Hasselmans will conduct a series of symphony concerts, and later to Monte Carlo for a concert series.

They will return to New York in December for the Metropolitan season.

Dream Is Fulfilled As Gypsy Predicts

Woman Awakes to Find Money Missing From Under Pillow.

Chicago, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Mrs. Dorothy Tindler was convinced today that dreams come true. She visited a gypsy girl the other day and had her fortune told.

"Place your money in a handkerchief underneath your pillow. Whatever you dream will come true."

Mrs. Tindler dreamed her money was stolen. She woke up, untied the handkerchief and found her dream fulfilled.

C. C. C. Men Invited To Another 6 Months

(Associated Press.)

A message from President Roosevelt to members of the Civilian Conservation Corps offering them the opportunity to reenlist for a second six-month period, if they have no jobs, was transmitted yesterday to the various forestation camps.

The message was sent to the camps through the War Department by Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work.

U. S. Narcotic Agent Nabs Two in Illinois

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Two men were arrested at the State Fair Grounds today by George Howard, Federal narcotic agent, and charged with violating the Federal narcotics law. They gave the names of Omer Chapman, of Brazil, Ind., and James H. Anderson, of Muncie.

Howard said drugs had been purchased from Anderson. Chapman is owner of a race horse.

French Assert Title to Islands

Intend to Reject Japan's Claims to Coral Group Near Philippines.

Paris, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—The French government intends to reject Japan's claims to ownership of nine small coral islands in the China Sea, near the Philippines, it was indicated today.

Despite Japan's verbal protests, it was learned, French occupation of the islands may be considered definitely and permanently established.

The islands form a minor archipelago between Indo-China and New Caledonia.

The French flag already is flying, it was understood, on the islands of Thi-Tu, Deux-Iles, Iu-Aba, Laoita, Tempete and Amboyne, and the others shortly are to be occupied formally. The Japanese claimed their possession was established by the fact that a Japanese phosphate company had been operating there for years.

Tokyo, however, had never formally claimed the islands and the French proceeded to occupy them, announcing claim to ownership.

The French gunboat Malicieuse in 1930 took official possession of the Ile de la Tempete, or Tempest Island, in the group under dispute. It was pointed out, and Japan's protest at this late date was received with surprise.

The islands, it was insisted, have been fully charted, explored and formally taken in the name of the French republic—and there was no disposition to turn them over now to the Japanese.

Lindberghs Reach Faroe Objective

Land at Tveraa Port on Mapping Flight via North Atlantic.

Lerwick, Shetland Islands, Aug. 24 (U.P.).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here today after a brief flight from Tveraa, in the Faroe group, northwest of the Shetlands.

The colonel brought the machine down after circling over the town three times. He taxied to the southern breakwater.

Lindbergh said they had an "excellent flight." They are mapping an air route over the north Atlantic to Europe.

Banking Cooperation.

Gen. Johnson says that something must be done immediately to expand commercial credit in view of the upward spiraling of prices and returning confidence in business. In any period of growing business activity increased banking accommodation must be supplied to sustain a larger volume of trade, and the present time is no exception to the rule. On the contrary, credit has to be furnished in liberal amounts to finance a recovery plan which calls for added outlays in anticipation of a business expansion still in its early stages.

In certain respects the financial problems created by the NRA program are unique and if they are to be met successfully, the banks of the country will have to assume some legitimate risks in coming to the assistance of industry. Higher rates of wages, heavier outlays for raw materials and in certain cases substantial processing taxes necessitate the provision of more banking credit for use by commercial borrowers. During the post-depression periods of the past, however, the demands made upon the banks have not developed suddenly, in response to governmental intervention. Corrective economic forces have been relied upon to effect a restoration of normal business activity by degrees, as the demand for labor and goods increased. Bankers felt less reluctant to respond to requests for increased credits under such conditions than they do now, when asked to finance a national recovery program of an admittedly experimental nature.

A banker has to consider first of all the safety of the funds entrusted to his keeping, but that does not imply a jealous hoarding of resources. What is needed is an intelligent appreciation of the special character of the financing program that confronts the banks under the industrial recovery program of the administration. Few problems are likely to arise in the case of strong concerns, equipped to stand the strain of increased outlays and even to finance temporary losses out of surplus. The difficult questions relate to the borderline cases—those so-called marginal concerns which may not be able to survive compulsory additions to their production costs under the industrial codes. The elimination of industrial activities which thrive only by exploiting their workers is cause for congratulation, and Gen. Johnson clearly has no desire to keep such establishments in existence unless they show a capacity to conform to decent standards. In some instances, no doubt, marginal concerns of this character will be a troublesome factor, but, generally speaking, their number and importance have probably been exaggerated. Furthermore, if business continues to improve the doubtful cases will become fewer.

Since the country is adequately supplied at the present time with banking resources for financing business recovery, the chief need of the moment is banking vision and banking confidence. But the greatest immediate hindrance to effective cooperation on the part of the banks is uncertainty regarding future monetary policies.

Fears arising from currency instability create distrust of long-time commitments and introduce a highly speculative element into all business transactions—even the most conservative—which make bankers reluctant to use the funds at their disposal as freely as they otherwise would. If the administration wishes to secure the wholehearted cooperation of the banks of the country to further its plans for organizing industry, it should, therefore, offer them assurances that contracts will not be impaired by progressive depreciation of the dollar.

Pipe Line Transportation.

As the news comes from Iraq that a 1,200-mile pipe line has been completed to carry the output of the Mosul petroleum fields to Mediterranean ports, it is recalled that more than a half century ago teamsters who drove oil tanks in Pennsylvania tried to stop the building of the first pipe lines, for fear that their business would be ruined. Later, in the West, pipe lines were opposed because of the competition they offered to railroads with their giant tank cars. Today the millions of barrels handled through the underground conveyors could no more be transported by rail than horse-drawn tanks could carry Pennsylvania oil after the industry was well started.

The new line that carries the flow of the Mosul wells across the Arabian desert, through the highlands of Palestine and over the mountains of Syria to the ports of Haifa and Tripoli, is an astounding accomplishment to the residents of those lands. Yet, by contrast, crude oil, gasoline and gas from the oil fields in this country are flowing through 100,000 miles of pipe lines. The requirements of the American petroleum industry call for more than 2,000,000 barrels of crude oil per day, while the automobiles of the country require approximately 15,000,000 gallons of gasoline annually. To move the vast oil output today would be an insuperable task without the aid of pipe lines.

"Toward Dictatorship."

Prof. William F. Ogburn, whose standing as a sociologist is of the highest, ventures the opinion that democracy is giving way to dictatorship. Speaking at the University of Chicago, he stated that he looked forward to the decline of democracy and the rise of a system of government that will utilize some of its principles but will nevertheless be an entirely different system. He added:

The movement toward dictatorship is going ahead. The government that is the speediest is the one that will survive. An executive with the power to act, such as that given President Roosevelt, will meet requirements of speed of action, and will be able to cope with rapid changes.

Presumably Prof. Ogburn, in speaking of "democracy," has in mind the American system of popular government, which, of course, is not pure democracy. In times of stress and disappointment it is customary for thinkers to look for profound changes in government, but when the country fares well the old system seems to hold its own. Even Newton D. Baker observed at Banff the other day that capitalistic government had been tried and found wanting, basing his opinion, doubtless, upon the world disorder attending the depression.

But is it true that democracy is too slow to work its will, and that only dictatorial executive government can cope with emergencies and rapid changes? The power given to President Roosevelt, to which Prof. Ogburn alludes, was conferred by a democracy, and certainly it can not be accused of lacking in speed or thoroughness in doing the job. But it acted only for the emergency, and by no means created a dictator, or even moved in the direction of a change from democracy to dictatorship. The power exercised by the President is the people's own power, exercised at their command and with their consent. It has been conferred upon other Presidents in various degrees in times of national peril.

No dictatorship not founded on the people's will could wield power over the United States. The people are jealous of their powers, and are apt to withdraw them as quickly as they have granted them when they are dissatisfied with the conduct of the government.

Doubtless, Prof. Ogburn has in mind a popular government which concentrates larger powers in the executive than is given in normal times in this country. It would seem to be a misnomer to call this a dictatorship. The judicial power would stand guard, and the legislative power would be distinct from the executive.

In so far as the power to act speedily is concerned, the American democracy has demonstrated its celerity on more than one occasion. Any form of government must be responsive to changing conditions, as a matter of course. Emergency situations call for temporary emergency action. This is a needed elasticity in any form of institution. The American people have indicated a willingness recently, as frequently in the past, to grant emergency powers to meet emergency situations. No safe deduction can be made that they are ready to surrender the powers of self-government for any new form of autocracy or dictatorship.

A Short College Course.

Educational innovations are somewhat the order of the day, but it remained for Indiana University to inaugurate a two-year course. It is expected that this experiment will bring at least the partial benefits of college training within reach of hundreds of students who otherwise would be barred entirely from this experience, since entrance requirements will not be as severe as for the regular course necessary to gain a degree.

Already more than 1,000 applications have been received from prospective entrants seeking information as to their eligibility for enrollment. The new course is not intended as a substitute for the customary four-year term, but rather to assist students whose secondary school work did not contemplate entering college, and who find themselves unable to matriculate as regular freshmen.

The Indiana short course will be open to any graduate of a public or private high school in the State without regard to the subjects studied. Arrangements will be made for applicants over 21 who are not high school graduates to enter as special students. Increased freedom in the election of studies will also be a feature of the short course. A student may follow a specialized line of study, such as journalism, or may divide his work among the sciences, literature, art, music and languages.

Two-year students will not be segregated by themselves, but will be incorporated in the regular college classes and be subject to the same requirements as to standards of work and attendance. Short term entrants will be permitted to transfer to the regular college course at any time upon completion of entrance requirements.

The Indiana departure has some eminent practical features, and actual operation of the short term will be watched with interest in many quarters.

Bromine From Sea Water.

Persistent chemical research over a number of years has resulted in the working out of methods of recovering bromine from the sea in commercial quantities. This useful product is the only non-metallic chemical element found in liquid form. It has long been used in medicine and in photography, and more recently as an ingredient of anti-knock gasoline and in the manufacture of tear gas. Seven years of experimentation has resulted in the perfection of extraction methods which will be employed in two plants at Kure Beach, south of Wilmington, N. C., where the sea water is found to be particularly free from surface water and organic matter.

The amount of bromine in the ocean is only one pound in about 8,000 tons of water. The two new plants being built to produce 500,000 pounds of bromine a month will have to handle more than 25,000 gallons of water per minute continuously day and night to process this amount of finished product. The operation, therefore, is rapid, requiring only about one minute in the plant for the release of the bromine through treatment of the sea water with chlorine. The free bromine is blown from the water by compressed air and absorbed by a soda solution.

The perfecting of this recovery process may preclude the possibility of any future shortage of bromine. It is estimated that only one cubic mile of ocean water would yield 300,000 tons of bromine.

It has been suggested that solving the problem of bromine extraction might stimulate the age-old effort to recover gold from sea water. Prof. William L. Laurence, however, reports that the last extensive attempt in this direction in Germany was very disappointing. It had been estimated that a ton of sea water contained five to ten milligrams of gold, but Fritz Haber's exhaustive experiments disclosed only about one-thousandth of that amount, so that gold recovery on a commercial basis was proved to be impossible.

Federal Aid for Teachers.

The Federal Relief Administrator has authorized payments from relief funds to needy unemployed teachers. Those who receive aid will be assigned to schools in rural counties which are to be closed wholly or in part during the coming school year for lack of funds. Provision is also made for giving employment relief in cities as well as rural counties to persons competent to teach illiterate adults.

As a rule, employment opportunities provided for the sake of making work of little direct value to the community at large, although highly desirable as a means of preserving the self-respect of those in need. Relief work which makes possible the re-employment of thousands of teachers is, however, as Mr. Hopkins says, "one of the most constructive applications of the principle of exchanging service to the community for public aid."

One of the major calamities of the prolonged period of depression which has forced States and local governments to apply for Federal aid has resulted from the progressive breakdown of systems of rural education and the growing demoralization of teaching forces both in town and in country. The figures cited by Mr. Hopkins showing that in 33 States about 80,000 teachers are unemployed sufficiently indicate the seriousness of prevailing conditions. These statistics, moreover, tell a most incomplete story, since they do not indicate the losses of instruction hours due to shortened sessions nor do they attempt to assess the decline in teaching efficiency due to the intolerable conditions under which many teachers have been forced to work.

There is always a danger that Federal funds advanced to finance local needs will destroy the sense of responsibility of the local governmental units. Mr. Hopkins appears, however, to have taken precautions to safeguard the conditions surrounding the grants to teachers with the view of reducing the chances of abuse.

Prof. Ogburn says he sees the end of democracy, and the Republican National Committee envies his keen eyesight.

The Leisure Problem.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

The use of leisure, as most of us are aware, is the final test of civilization. When, therefore, a gentleman like Mr. John W. Davis expresses the fear that less than eight hours of work a day will lead to the demoralization of the American people he is impugning their capacity in the mass to pass this test. Perhaps he is right. It is an old aristocratic view, supported by philosophers from Plato to Nietzsche, that only a small minority of any race is equipped to loaf and at the same time invite the soul. But the very convenience of this theory to those who enunciate it renders it suspect. Where in history has it ever had adequate demonstration?

However, there can be no question that the NRA program substantially to reduce the hours of toil for an entire population while providing every one with a living wage will, if successful, present an immediate problem. It is perfectly true that the American people, considered as a whole, do not now know how to play. With the pressure on them during three centuries to subdue a continent they have never had a proper chance to learn. Their idea of justification by work has been so ingrained that with the multiplication of labor-saving inventions they have merely increased the tempo of their efforts to keep pace with their machines. The result has been the substitution of excitement for leisure in the few hours they have allowed themselves away from their jobs. Their pleasure-seeking is hectic, impetuous, the reverse of relaxing. They need education in the art of idleness.

We much prefer the latter phrase to "self-improvement." The two may be basically synonymous, but self-improvement suggests a too conscious cultivation of the good life which is more than likely to fail of its object. And it is on this point that we would warn the committee of eminent citizens, including Mr. Davis, just appointed by Mr. Whalen to tackle the problem. Their precepts will do more harm than good if they are aimed at teaching the workers of New York how they may avoid loafing in their spare time. Their pupils will resent the pious "uplift" implied. On the other hand, should this committee—and others of its kind which no doubt will soon be springing up over the country—devote itself to celebrating the joys of loafing as distinct from excitement chasing, it may in the end get somewhere and do America an enormous service—no less a one than that of helping it to become truly civilized.

A Welcome Bit of Government Regulation.

Letters to the Editor.

Suggests New War and Navy Building East of the Capitol, Where Traffic Is Not Congested.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the Federal building projects we heard very much about a few years ago is a new War and Navy Department Building. Considerable controversy raged as to the site for this proposed new building. The site most favored required the demolishing of several large apartment buildings. With funds available from the public works fund, we may hear of this project again. It has been admitted that any increase in Government office buildings south of the Avenue and in the congested area means that money must be spent for subways. We suggest that this new building be placed east of the Capitol, where there is no congestion of traffic. This would cause many new private business buildings to be built in the eastern part of the city to provide for the wants of Federal employees and persons who have business dealings with those departments.

DILWORTH POWELL.

Rerouting of Car Lines Might Produce More Revenue and Provide Better Facilities.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The merger of the two street railway companies presents many problems in rerouting the car lines. It is suggested that the Eleventh street line be abandoned. Of the several lines serving this territory it seems that the Ninth street line will be the least necessary. Georgia avenue cars can continue down Seventh street. Ninth street could be used during rush hours for express lines, not stopping between the business section and U streets. A two-way loop of Eleventh or Fourteenth, U, Seventh, and E streets northwest, charging 5-cent fare would produce additional revenue. These cars could have a special distinguishing color, and have a large "5 cents" painted on the car.

In some cities the 25-cent Sunday pass good on all lines all day Sunday, is used; also the weekly pass which sells for $1.50 has proved a revenue producer.

DILWORTH POWELL.

Don't Crowd Too Many Pleasures in One Day, Says Philosopher.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To enjoy our lives thoroughly and intelligently we must not be too over-anxious to crowd too many diversified pleasures into a limited period of time, but instead select unselfishly a certain pleasure for today and reserve others for tomorrow. If we want to read a book today, then put off the theater engagement till the morrow. Our pleasures are an important factor in our lives to alleviate our cares and refresh us for our daily routine; we should, therefore, have them so regulated that each event will give us new thrills in pleasure.

If we can not anticipate a given pleasure, with that childhood enthusiasm in our after-life we have only ourselves to blame; barring physical and mental handicaps. It is because we have tasted of the pleasures of life immaturely and have exhausted the supply. In such cases tragic consequences usually result. Life is intensely interesting when we have successfully varied pleasures to unfold before us. Life will always be interesting as long as we can fulfill our craving for a particular kind of pleasure.

KENNARD J. CONNOR.

THE FIRST JAZZ BAND.

It is recalled that the Royal Artillery Band, which accompanies the Woolwich searchlight tattoo, was the only regimental band recognized and provided for in the estimates of 1832, says the London Evening News. In that year it consisted of 38 performers, including two Negroes who played the big drum, the cymbals, and the "Jingling Johnnies." This apparently was the first official recognition of a jazz band. Supernatural foresight can not be expected, even from the military.

The Thief Seems a Fine Fellow If You Are Looking for a Precedent to Justify Your Theft

By Robert Quillen.

USING your neighbor as a model is a dangerous practice: First, because your natural desire to justify yourself will cause you to use him as an alibi much more frequently than you will use him as a good example; second, because your imitation of him is a commendation of what he has done, and thus each of you confirms the other in error.

Consider the matter of training children. Your daughter yearns to attend an all-night party and says to you: "There's nothing wrong about it, Dad; all of the girls of my crowd will be there."

You want her to have a good time; you don't want to be unreasonable; and you say to yourself: "Well, if other parents permit their girls to go, I suppose it's all right. I don't want to be a crank."

That seems sensible, but there's a joker in it. Other parents are using you as an alibi just as you are using them. They, also, are reluctant to grant permission; and they say to you: "Well, he's giving his child permission to go, why shouldn't I?"

Neither you nor the other parents give a thought to the one independent in the community who flatly says "No." You simply follow the course of least resistance and then look about for something that will justify your weakness.

Whenever you hear a man say, "Everybody else is doing it," you are safe in assuming that he is trying to soothe his conscience. The fact that everybody else is being sensible doesn't affect the man who is bent on folly. In that case, he tells himself that everybody else is narrow-minded and he alone is liberal and courageous enough to be free of herd influence.

But if he is bent on folly, he feels the need of moral support and looks about to find somebody as foolish as himself. When he finds them, the discovery takes away his last quail. "There," says he, "these fine people are doing the same thing. That proves it's all right."

And those same fine people, with consciences as uneasy as his, are saying to themselves: "He does it, and he's a fine fellow. It must be all right."

There isn't much hope for a youngster when he learns to quiet his conscience with those five fatal words: "Everybody else is doing it."

Comment of the Press

Liquor Control in Missouri.

KANSAS CITY TIMES.
With repeal of the eighteenth amendment in sight, in the opinion of competent authorities, both wet and dry, Missouri may be without any legal regulation of the liquor traffic once repeal is effected unless in the meantime a system of control shall have been provided by the Legislature. If these authorities are right, then there would be nothing to prevent the opening of saloons throughout the State after repeal, unless a regulatory law is enacted.

Both parties are pledged to prevent the return of the saloon. In the keeping of these pledges, there is common ground on which both wets and dries can and should meet. With the sale of liquor made legal, the purpose should be to minimize the evils of dispensing them. Along with the public and many organizations identified with the liquor question, the beer interests are against the open saloon. These interests have no desire to add the saloon to their already almost unlimited outlets for legalized beer. They are making a united effort to prevent the association of beer and hard liquor, an association that involved heavy license costs, political tribute and expensive competitive practices in the old days.

No Hysteria.

TOPEKA CAPITAL.
The less hysteria that is invoked in the NRA campaign the better the results are likely to be. People can not adjust themselves overnight to such unprecedented prices as Government urging that prices be raised on one hand and urging the consumer to buy on the other. But on bargain days people flock into the stores to buy, with better spirit than before the recovery campaign started.

Magnetic Menu.

LOS ANGELES TIMES.
When President Roosevelt dropped in on a Conservation Corps camp for luncheon the other day, the menu consisted of fried steak, mashed potatoes, string beans, lettuce and tomato salad and apple cobbler. Perhaps this explains why so few of the boys avail themselves of week-end leaves of absence.

The Lgner Evil.

SPRINGFIELD UNION.
It is the opinion of former Gov. Cox of Ohio, delegate to the London conference, that it was called too early. That is undoubtedly better than calling a conference too late.

Fears Soviet Competition.

BROOKLYN EAGLE.
It is clear that eventually the Russians, whose commercial honesty with regard to any obligations accepted by the Soviets has not been impeached, must pay in goods, and the range of their exportable commodities not competing with our own fields and factories is very narrow. In platinum and in furs there is nothing to worry us. But when it comes to candies and electric light bulbs, lumber, coal or even "genuine Russian caviar" we have justifiable apprehensions. That is one reason why the R. F. C. is likely to go slow about stimulating in this way the export interests of the United States.

Just Folks.

When a Baby Comes.

When a little babe is born
Changed is all the mighty earth
Still the sun will rise at morn,
But the miracle of birth
Brings another life to share
All the world's increasing care.

With that first sweet, plaintive cry
There is ushered in one more
Who in all the years gone by Earth has never known before.
And that little tiny thing
May bear gifts none else could bring.

Not alone unto the few
Dear and close are changes brought,
There are countless strangers who Must give time and care and thought
To the life that's just begun
Till their own last hour is run.

And it may be as the years
Swing their rapid course away
And the proper time appears
All the world shall hail the day
Sounding cymbal, drum and horn,
When that little babe was born.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Barger.

GOOD morning, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience. After a brief announcement we will present Col. Louis McHenry Howe, secretary to the President, in his weekly analysis of what the Government is doing.

Did you ever stop to consider the high efficiency of Bunko electric bulbs? Bunko electric bulbs are kind to your eyes. There are eyes and there are bulbs, but Bunko bulbs make a symphony of the two. Call up your dealer tomorrow and ask him to send you some Bunko bulbs. Bunko bulbs add to the life of the optical nerve.

Now we will present to you Mr. Walter Trumbull, who will interview Col. Louis McHenry Howe for the radio audience. Mr. Trumbull:

Col. Howe, I am sure the American people would like for you to tell them something about President Roosevelt's back-to-the-farm movement.

Walter, I am glad you brought that up. The President's back-to-the-farm movement, in my opinion, is one of the greatest features of his program. It will affect the destinies of every man, woman and child in this country, not in the immediate future but over a long range.

Yes, Mr. Howe, that's the reason I asked you to tell the people about it.

Thank you, Mr. Trumbull, I am glad you asked me.

Walter, you must remember that in the beginning of this country man got in the habit of manufacturing little things such as cowbells to cover the body and shield it from the weather and moccasins to cover the feet. At first he manufactured them for himself alone and then learning that they would not hurt the rest of the family, he manufactured them for his wife and children.

As time wore on, Walter, he found he was making more of these things than he and his family needed. He found he could barter off this surplus to his neighbors and friends.

That, Walter, was the beginning of manufacture in this country. Now, Walter, as the population of the country grew, people inclined to settle on rivers so their manufacturing would have access to markets and overland channels have been naturally toward railroad centers and it was here that our great manufacturing centers developed.

It has come now to the point, Walter, where these manufacturing centers are about stifled to death. So crowded are they, so congested that the costs of commerce and of living have become vitally prohibitive. Underground and overhead channels have been evolved and for additional outlet we must go to the stratosphere. It is an impossible situation, Walter, a situation that makes for unhappiness of the people. It is no way to live.

Why, the trucking costs of a city like New York alone add an almost impossible burden on the people. In an effort to make conditions bearable in these great industrial centers our governmental budgets have reached amazing proportions.

Louis, that is very interesting. But just where does it tie up with the President's program?

Mr. Trumbull, I'll tell you that. I'm glad you brought it up. Under the President's plan, communities will be set up away from the great centers so that the overflow or seasonal employees of great manufacturing plants will have a place nearby to live and cultivate some of the necessities of life in their spare time.

It will make better citizens of them, Walter, to live out in God's pure sunshine and breathe the breath of the pastures and the fields. When there is employment at the mills they can go there and their residential budgets little communities where they will become civic-minded, where they will become interested in a bigger and better Government and vote the Democratic ticket.

Yes, Col. Howe, but how will they get to the cities when there is employment?

Why, Mr. Trumbull, that's what we call a social trend.

All right, thank you Col. Howe, good-day.

Ladies and gentlemen, this is station WHOOPS. You have just heard the weekly report on the Government by Col. Louis McHenry Howe, interviewed by Walter Trumbull. Next week at this time Col. Howe will interview on Alice in Wonderland.

And don't forget those Bunko bulbs.

BORROWED PLUMES.

Leghorn, it appears from a consular report, does not make the famous straw and velvet hats that bear her name. She only handles those that are made far up in the Tuscan hills. In the same way Panama, even back in the day's before De Lesseps, was known the world around for the hats made by South and Central American Indians 1,000 miles from the isthmus. But Panama was the common trading center to which they were fetched for export, and so the headgear got its name, according to the Boston Transcript.

And they tell us also that the children of the Celestial Empire, in their old Chinese homes, know no such concoction as chop suey. It is a dish of American invention. Nor can you get a Welsh rabbit in Wales. If you want good Yorkshire pudding let a New York cook make it for you; nothing served-up from an English kitchen can touch it. And the best Frankfurters come, not from Frankfurt, but from Vienna, and are properly "wieners."

Union Praises Railway Stand Of Roosevelt

Johnston Approves Plan to Avoid Labor Disputes Now.

Cleveland, Aug. 24 (AP)—Railway labor, through one of its spokesmen, today applauded the stand taken by President Roosevelt in the Kansas City Southern Railway's dispute with trainmen over wages and working conditions.

David B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, saw in the letter Mr. Roosevelt recently handed C. E. Johnston, president of the Southern, an endorsement of the things for which labor has been fighting. He said he was certain his views were shared by the heads of all other large railroad brotherhoods.

Favors Status Quo.

"As Mr. Roosevelt suggests," Robertson said, "the appropriate thing to do now is to let the matter continue as it is. The railroads shouldn't attempt to enforce a radical change in the wage and working conditions of their men."

In his letter to Johnston, the President said he preferred that the Kansas City Southern postpone final settlement of the dispute without prejudice to the rights of either side.

Frowns on Experiment.

The President's alternative suggestion to place changed wages and working conditions in effect for an experimental period met with disfavor from Robertson.

Labor's experience with experimental agreements had been unsatisfactory in the past, he said.

Shouse Sees Texas In Repeal Column

Liquor by December, He Predicts Upon Return From Europe.

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Jouett Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, back from Europe today, predicted Texas will vote for repeal by a large majority.

"James Farley, the Postmaster General," Shouse said, "has done fine work in lining up the Southern States. I have known of every move since I left, even the expressions of Vice President Garner in Texas."

"Not only is Texas going for repeal, but the country will have repealed the eighteenth amendment by December when some of the States are to elect delegates to repeal conventions."

Boy Corn Crib Inmate Committed to Asylum

Prestonsburg, Ky., Aug. 24 (AP)—Thirteen-year-old Jimmy Crawford, who was found locked in a corn crib with a bed of weeds Tuesday by a county health nurse, was adjudged insane today and ordered committed to the Eastern State Hospital at Lexington. It was charged his parents had kept him prisoner since he was 10 years old.

A warrant charging his father with cruelty was not executed.

Polio's Girl Accuser Must Appear in Court

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—Miss Eugenia Rose must appear before Magistrate Willis R. Brightmire tomorrow and tell him so personally if she does not wish to press criminal attack charges she brought against Cecil Smith, Texas polio.

Brightmire issued a subpoena today for the 23-year-old nurse to be present when the case is called. Miss Rose has been in virtual seclusion since she obtained the warrant for Smith's arrest.

Peace Pact Annulled In Central America

San Salvador, Aug. 24 (AP)—Congress today declared void the Central American treaty of peace and conciliation drawn up at an international conference in Washington in 1922.

The pact was described as in conflict with friendly relations of the Central American countries. It also was declared void since it had not been registered with the League of Nations, as provided under article 18.

St. Lawrence Treaty Ratification Foreseen

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Returning from an inspection of the St. Lawrence River, Senator Edward P. Costigan, of Colorado, said in a statement today the "selfish" opposition of a few railroads and power companies would fail to block ratification by Congress of the St. Lawrence treaty.

Costigan visited the sites of the proposed works in New York and Ontario.

Boy Scouts at Camp Wilson Escape With Little Storm Damage

Roosevelt Pier Washed Away, Capital Road Made Impassable.

Scout Calendar

Tomorrow, 7:30 p. m.—Court of Review and Court of Honor, at Camp Wilson, Burnt Mills, Md.

Wednesday, August 30—4 p. m., Cub swim; 5 p. m., Scout swim, at Y. M. C. A.

Saturday, September 2—7:30 p. m., Court of Review and Court of Honor at Camp Wilson, Burnt Mills, Md.

Wednesday, September 6—4 p. m., Cub swim; 5 p. m., Scout swim, at Y. M. C. A.

Every day seems to be a gala day at Camp Wilson, where from 50 to 100 Scouts have swimming, pillow fighting, barrel tilting, string burning, treasure hunts, tug-of-war. William H. Murray, camp director, is always thinking up something to make it attractive for the Scouts. Parents and friends find it a nice drive to Burnt Mills and every evening there is a group of them at camp.

Scouts also have the benefit of instructions in all branches of Scouting and the advantage they are taking of this phase of camp life is clearly shown at the weekly Saturday evening courts, where advancement in rank and Merit Badges are awarded.

There are well-built "shacks" with eight cots each for those who wish to use them, but a large percentage prefer the tent life.

Their menus and cooking are supervised by the camp director and his staff and a well supplied commissary proves of great help to the Scouts.

The woods look like a pioneer's camp of the early days, with 38 pyramidal wall and pup tents pitched in groups.

Training Courses Planned for Fall. The committee on leadership training, of which Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin is president, has planned a series of training courses for Scoutmasters and other Scouts to begin early in the fall.

It is probable that courses in "Elements and Principles of Scoutmastering" will be held, as well as a course in first aid given by the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross.

All Scout leaders who are interested in enrolling for any of the courses are asked to send their name to Scout Headquarters, 1103 Vermont avenue.

The swim date for August 23 at the McKinley Pool was postponed until September 6 on account of the storm. Hours of admission, 10 to 12 noon, and 1 to 6 p. m. Admission by uniform or registration cards.

Detailed plans for the fifth annual Eagle Trip are rapidly being perfected. The route will lead out into western Maryland, northward through the mountains of western Pennsylvania, to the Allegheny National Forest, up to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, across New York State via the Finger Lakes Region to the Catskills, down through the Poconos to the Michaux State Forest in southern Pennsylvania, and home. The trip will last nine days, from September 9 to 17, and cost $20 apiece. There are still several places open to interested Scouts.

Our World Jamboree delegation sailed from Hamburg Wednesday on the S. S. President Harding, and are due in New York next Friday.

Scouts Enjoying World's Fair.

Last Monday Assistant Scoutmaster Ray Heacock's motor camping party set out for the World's Fair. They spent three days en route, reaching Chicago in time for the Boy Scout Day demonstration. They are now enjoying the hospitality of Dr. and Mrs. Fish and their sons, Bill and Dave, camping on their premises at Evanston, Ill., by night and doing intensive sightseeing by day. Those in the party are Ray Heacock, Bert Nye and Wallace Evans, of Troop 8; Thomas Goldman, of Troop 3; and William Powell, a former Scout from Salisbury, Md.

Among various parties of Scouts who have been sightseeing in Europe since the close of the Boy Scout Jamboree is a group of 30 Scouts from Seattle, Wash., under the leadership of Scout Executive Stuart P. Walsh, who are spending several days in Washington this coming week, seeing the Nation's Capital en route to the West. They are a lively bunch and enthusiastic over their experience.

Wilson and Roosevelt Damaged.

With a real gale blowing over 40 miles an hour, part of the pier at Camp Roosevelt washed away. The pier had weathered many severe storms but this was a bit too much and part of the pier gave way. At 2:30 p. m. on Wednesday, the pier was reported to be giving way, bit by bit. No complete information on the damage to the pier was available yesterday, but Linn C. Drake, Scout executive, was planning to go to the camp in the afternoon.

Several trees were across the road, which made the way to camp unapproachable by automobile. No damage was done to the camp buildings and all persons in camp were reported safe. The routes to the camp from Washington were in many places impassable. Several places between Washington and Marlboro were under water and several stretches of road on the other side of Marlboro were covered by water. The route by North Beach was impassable by autos as it was covered with water. Trains are running, however, and the camp could be reached on foot. The roads are expected to be clear very soon.

Camp Wilson itself was not seriously damaged by the storm. It was almost isolated from Washington by the bridge washing out above the camp. Part of the dam at the power plant gave way and washed out the bridge. The camp may be reached by going around Colesville, however. No one was hurt at Burnt Mills.

Scoutmasters Honor Mattie. Col. E. L. Mattie, assistant Scout executive, was honored by a surprise party, given by the Scoutmaster's Club, at his home on August 23. About 20 Scoutmasters and wives were present. Refreshments were prepared by William Murray, president of the club.

Troop 70, Albright Memorial Church, is preparing for a fall program full of many and varied activities. Handicraft is coming in with its share as the Scouts are working on improvement of the troop room. Totem poles are being erected and the patrols are working on their patrol corners.

Attention is already being paid to preparations for a mammoth parents' night program to be given the latter part of November. Patrols are already beginning to plan their stunts. Work on a large issue of the troop paper, the Axe, has begun.

Hooray! Scouts are again invited to attend the Friday games at the Griffith Stadium on September 8 and 15.

Strong Programs Among Troops.

That "summertime is Scouting time" has been demonstrated by the large increase in the number of troops in Washington which have carried on special summer meetings. Some troops have taken a short vacation during the month of August, but in general the old plan of disbanded the troop for a period of two or three months during the best Scout season of the year has been abandoned.

The summer meeting programs have been largely outdoor affairs, short hikes, picnics or other special events considerably different from the year-round indoor meetings of the fall and winter months.

This strong emphasis on the part of a large number of the most effective troops, together with the summer Scouting program of activities, as well as the more than a thousand Scouts attending Camp Roosevelt and Camp Wilson, means that much Scouting has been done during the last few months.

Smart Look First Essential To Career Girl

Poise and Appearance Outweigh Skill, Says Man Who Knows.

This is the story, girls. What's inside your head is probably only one-fifth as important as what's on it, when you go looking for a job. And should you land the job, the gray of the hypothetical content of your cranium was probably the least important shade in the pleasing combination of colors that won the boss' eye.

We have it on authority. Pinckney J. Harman told us. And he surely ought to know. For 29 years he has been supervising the training of ambitious young women for entry into the business world. And, on the most conservative estimate, he has passed upon the qualifications of at least 15,000 girls during that period.

Personality Girls' Best Bet.

"Personality, not brains, is the reason for a girl's success in business," Mr. Harman believes. He cites the statement of Dr. H. W. Mikesell, professor of psychology at Wichita University.

Says Dr. Mikesell: "Psychology has determined by actual experiment that success depends 85 per cent upon personality and only 15 per cent on brains."

And the term, "personality," includes a multitude of graces, in Mr. Harman's vocabulary.

"It's made up of a girl's smile, her style, her poise, her composure, the modulation of her voice; the neatness of her hair, the way she wears her hat," elucidated Mr. Harman.

"If a girl has personality, and it's a relatively small number, I might say, a very small number, who have, the odds are pretty sure to succeed in business."

"And if she hasn't got it, it's almost impossible to supply it. And she's going to find it difficult to establish herself in the business world, and even harder to advance to a position of importance." Thus Mr. Harman says.

Schools Can't Supply It.

Can secretarial schools supply personality? Well, at least they try.

Mr. Harman, who is vice president and director of the Strayer College, in the Homer Building, which today has 1,400 students enrolled in secretarial, accounting and business administration courses, 850 of whom are girls, says:

"We have confidential talks with girls who seem to have no conception of what constitutes, or how to achieve, personal attractiveness."

"We have lectures by physicians, who tell them how to build up their physical vitality, which is tremendously important to charm. They are advised as to right diet, rest and recreation. We emphasize the absolute necessity of careful personal grooming."

"We conduct our secretarial course on the theory that poise and personality are just as essential as technical perfection, in equipping young woman for business."

Technical Skill Secondary.

"In fact, I may say that between the two, poise and personality will outweigh the importance of purely technical skill."

"It's simply a matter of atmosphere and proportion. The wide-awake, progressive business man is generally the one who is most particular about his business surroundings. He will insist on expensive office furnishings in the best of taste. He provides the best modern equipment, knowing that first impressions are lasting. And in the matter of personnel, his eye guides his mind in the matter of selection."

"Why, because of lack of personality, we have to send out our technically most perfect students to a prospective employer with apologies for their appearance," exclaimed Mr. Harman. "We know if some special plea is not advanced they won't stand a chance. We ask that they not be judged on appearance alone, but that they be given a chance, in spite of it, to show what they can do."

Money Not Essential.

"But the employer is never wholly convinced. And the chances of such girls are limited at best."

"And there is little the school can do. It is difficult to make people over. Once in a while we succeed in teaching a girl to groom herself properly and to develop a certain poise. But such cases are rare."

Mr. Harman brushed aside the suggestion that, come several pay days, wonders might be worked in an unattractive appearance.

"It has nothing to do with money," he contested. "It's simply a case of being neat, and scrupulously clean, and dressed to suit the occasion. It's a matter of being cheerful without being gushing, and of watching the voice, so that it's neither too loud nor too low, and of keeping the hair neat."

So what price career, girls?

Old Salts Toe Mark and Get Boilers In Shipshape for Woman Inspector

Anna E. Keyser Asks No Odds as She Does Difficult Job.

"Good gosh! It's a woman!" Yes, indeed. It's Mrs. Anna E. Keyser, Assistant Supervising Inspector General of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service.

And the greeting is customary. But nothing more disrespectful than sheer surprise, articulated by sun-browned seamen, is intended. She is boarding the S. S. City of Montgomery for the purpose of inspecting it. Capt. Hartley is at her elbow.

The sailors had been prepared for an inspector.

"Feller, name of Keyser, from Washington. Said to be the hardest man at headquarters. No rusty boilers or fumbler's salts stand a chance of his 'okay.' They knew that much."

But they had not been prepared for a woman.

The seamen recover themselves and salute. The captain does the honors.

Seamen Accept Her.

"Mrs. Keyser, you must meet a couple of my old standbys, Mr. Paroni and Mr. Massey. Men, this is Mrs. Keyser." He gives her a little salute.

The assistant inspector general grins. She is used to this sort of speechless wonder. "Oh, yes; I remember—Mr. Paroni. We 'found' you, didn't we, last year for a relative? And Mr. Massey. I'm glad to know you both."

The salutes nod and stare, and soften. This mild little woman with the soft voice and friendly smile seems not out of drawing in such a picture. Her kindly blue eyes have the far-seeing clarity, the quiet assurance, of skippers they have known.

Even in skirts, without the boots and overalls that constitute her inspection uniform, she looks seaworthy, does Anna E. Keyser. In her spacious office on the "main deck" of the Commerce Building, with its pictures and models of ships and ship parts, you almost feel that you are on board a liner.

Responsive, though sparing in words; efficient and poised in her collaboration with Inspector General Dickinson N. Hoover, "the General," and with her dozen or more local assistants, this motherly looking little blonde, on the sunny side of 40, fits into a job that would seem meant for a man, and a real sea man, at that.

Handles Man-Sized Job.

The little woman often during "the General's" inspection absence is responsible for the safety of thousands of lives and millions of dollars in cargoes. The safe handling of one ocean liner, from port to port, is a man-sized job. The inspection and regulation of some 6,000 vessels annually, carrying many thousands of passengers and the commerce of the world, is her job.

Ship boilers and tail shafts, pintles and scuppers, she has come to know as well as hairpins, in the 16 years she has been working her way up from the lowest clerkship to second in command. Safety regulations and devices, the points of difference between kapok and balsam wood life preservers; the proper line of the hull to lay down a vessel's curves under construction; the correct weights and equipment of rafts, floats and lifeboats; blueprints of plans for ships that will some day sail the seas—these are A B C's to Anna E. Keyser.

There is not a man below decks or above who can stump her with technical terms. Yet she is modest in the extreme and reluctant to talk about her job until you touch on the human side of it.

Human Side Holds Appeal.

"It's not all boilers and blueprints," she explains, quietly amused. "So much that we do is human. These rather dry-looking card indexes are more or less statistics they're our handclasp with the many thousands we've licensed. And so many of them, these below-decks fellows are often just driftwood, but they're human, like the rest of us."

Her eyes are reminiscent, faintly sad, until a little smile breaks through. "Often they are the sort who could seem almost burlesque, but you can't look upon them that way. Many of them have cut themselves off from unhappier conditions, have tried to lose themselves, yet often we're forced to find them and give their identity back to families who need them. And sometimes to the law."

The trails of justice wind often to this office, into its files with their fingerprints of the hundreds of thousands of men she has licensed. And many times a long futile search is rewarded here.

Shares Responsibility for Seaworthiness of U. S. Merchant Marine.

apparatus and the "assistant general" scans reports and plans, as much at home with them as another woman with a fashion magazine. Has the complete detecting system stood a 60-day endurance test? Is it normally free of electrical grounds? Are ample instructions written in its charts?

She finds the answers to these and a dozen more requirements, so this fire-detector wins the broad, manly signature, "A. E. Keyser," which has come to mean a reliable okay to some 400 inspectors and their assistants at headquarters and in the field.

Mrs. Keyser foresook teaching in an Ohio business college in 1917, after her husband's death, to fill a Washington vacancy in the Steamboat Inspection Service. Born and educated in Pennsylvania, a descendant on her mother's side of John C. Calhoun, she traces back to no New England sea captains to explain her love of ships and seas. She does, however, know them both and love them.

The Atlantic and Pacific coasts, the Great Lakes and the main rivers, she has traveled often on official and pleasure tours. On every ship she sails, large or small, a visit to the boiler and engine rooms holds more of a thrill than does deck tennis for this "guardian of our ships."

Some of these ships you may be sailing yourself some day. When you do, though Anna E. Keyser may not be there in overalls and boots, safely shall you roll along because her stamp of approval is on the hull and engine and crew.

"One of the hardest things I ever did," she goes on, "was to turn over to the authorities a young seaman we traced to a hospital in Toledo. He was sick and absolutely without friends or home. He had forged a check in Baltimore two years before. I had to do it, but it seemed like betraying one of my own."

New Reduction Plan for Cotton Nearly Ready

Payments of $3 to $11 Per Acre Are Proposed for Curtailing Crop.

(Associated Press.)

Approval of Secretary Wallace and President Roosevelt was virtually all that was necessary yesterday to put before the growers for acceptance a new cotton plan to limit acreage to 25,000,000 next year.

One of its important features would assure a parity price to the cotton farmers on about half his average production during the last five years. It would be put into effect under a modification of the domestic allotment plan.

Plan Ready September 1.

The parity price for cotton is the figure at which it must sell to have the purchasing power it had from 1909 to 1914. Present farm prices are about 6 cents below parity.

The plan is to be announced September 1, or shortly thereafter. As in this year's emergency reduction campaign, which took more than 10,000,000 acres out of production, the farmer would receive cash rentals on the land he turned to other purposes or left idle.

A suggestion that the payments range from $3 to $11 an acre is under consideration.

Financed by Tax.

Eventually, the money which goes to the grower will come, Farm Administration officials say, from the processing tax on lint cotton. It is now 4.2 cents a pound.

The present plan is to have Federal financial agencies refuse credit to those farmers who balk at acreage reduction.

The program will apply probably on the 1934 crop, and the Secretary of Agriculture may, at his discretion, continue it for succeeding years.

Government agents went ahead with plans to plow up cotton in cases where farmers have declined to carry out their acreage curtailment agreements signed in this year's campaign. Cost of plowing will be deducted from payments.

U. S. Disbursing Units Surveyed for Merger

A survey of Government disbursing units is being made by the Treasury Department in preparation for establishment of a central disbursing unit to handle all Federal funds, it was learned yesterday.

The central agency must be set up by December 31, but plans are under way to have it gradually assimilate individual disbursing offices, beginning shortly after September 1.

Ted Church declared it was not a part of the now famous Columbia "hurricane" broadcast.

At any rate within a few minutes the PEPCO switchboard was swamped with telephone calls. To be told "to turn out their lights" seemed to terrify many and they pleaded for the reason for this extreme measure.

"It wouldn't have made a bit of difference whether the lights were on or off," Mr. Sharpe said, discussing the incident, "and I can't for life of me see how such a thing got started. It spread as we look back it was quite serious at the time. I really believe this alarmed the people more than anything else in connection with the hurricane scare."

Despite the terrific time stations had keeping themselves on the air atmospheric conditions insofar as listening was concerned were as fine Wednesday night as any night this season. Local stations never sounded better and outside stations came in as clear as a bell. Oftentimes it was necessary to increase the volume a third or half again as loud as usual to drown out the noise of the storm, but otherwise everything was tip-top and no one listening to his radio could possibly imagine the anxiety of the engineers and program managers. It was not until midnight that the radio people began to relax. For them it was the kind of a night which brings gray hairs.

Ted Church declared it was not a part of the now famous Columbia "hurricane" broadcast.

At any rate within a few minutes the PEPCO switchboard was swamped with telephone calls. To be told "to turn out their lights" seemed to terrify many and they pleaded for the reason for this extreme measure.

"It wouldn't have made a bit of difference whether the lights were on or off," Mr. Sharpe said, discussing the incident, "and I can't for life of me see how such a thing got started. It spread as we look back it was quite serious at the time. I really believe this alarmed the people more than anything else in connection with the hurricane scare."

Despite the terrific time stations had keeping themselves on the air atmospheric conditions insofar as listening was concerned were as fine Wednesday night as any night this season. Local stations never sounded better and outside stations came in as clear as a bell. Oftentimes it was necessary to increase the volume a third or half again as loud as usual to drown out the noise of the storm, but otherwise everything was tip-top and no one listening to his radio could possibly imagine the anxiety of the engineers and program managers. It was not until midnight that the radio people began to relax. For them it was the kind of a night which brings gray hairs.

Exhibit Prizes Lure Members Of 4-H Clubs

Young Virginia Farmer Wins $1,000 Showing One Baby Beef.

Stanton, Va., Aug. 24 (Sp.).—Four-H Club work has its social and educational attractions, but the financial side is not to be "sneezed" at, say those making plans for 4-H participation in the Staunton Fair, opening September 4.

They point to the achievement of Elwood Shifflet, of Fisherville, this county, who in one year won more than $1,000 in prizes on one baby beef exhibited at several of the larger fairs in the East as well as at the Staunton Exposition.

The Augusta 4-H Club will have exhibits in many departments, including baby beefs, dairy calves, swine, lambs, vegetables, hays and grains, domestic science, domestic manufacture, and other projects of improvement. About 3,000 square feet of exhibition space is at its disposal.

The 4-H juvenile exhibits will be directed by Joseph C. Coier, county agent. Products of girl members will be arranged under the auspices of Miss Ruth Jamison, Augusta's home demonstration agent.

Narcotics Sale In Canal Zone Brings Inquiry

Eight Troopers Discharged in Year Because of Drugs' Ravages.

Sale of morphine, cocaine and opium to American residents of the Panama Canal Zone—many of them soldiers and sailors—has reached such alarming proportions as to occasion investigation by United States authorities.

In one year, it was learned from War Department records last night, eight Zone troopers were so ravaged by drugs it was necessary to discharge them.

An investigator for the State Department surveyed the situation. The trouble, it was declared, lies in the Republic of Panama, beyond the reach of diplomatic negotiations.

Drugs Sent From Germany.

The drugs are imported from Germany, direct to Costa Rica and Colombia, and because Costa Rica possesses only nominal control of narcotics—and Colombia virtually none—the drugs easily are smuggled from there into the Republic of Panama.

There is concrete evidence in the advice from the Zone that much opium, morphine and cocaine thus brought to Panama is sold in Colon and Panama City licensed red-light districts and vice dives to American sailors, soldiers and residents of the Canal Zone who must seek Panamanian territory for night clubs and the rougher pleasures, because all property within the Zone is owned by the Government.

Some of the drugs, however, it was made known, are smuggled into the Zone to the further detriment of those living in American territory.

Between October 5, 1932, and March 4 of this year there were at least 26 arrests or convictions for violation of the antinarcotics laws in Panama City and Colon territory under jurisdiction both of the United States and the republic.

American soldiers and sailors and American nationals were involved.

Planes Transport Drugs.

Airplanes carrying mail have been used to transport drugs directly into the Zone.

Crews of ships have resorted to peddling of narcotics to obtain easy money.

A "doped" cigarette officially was listed as the thing which on January 10 caused Henry R. Zachary, of the Navy, to remove his clothes at a Balboa baseball game and crawl about on all-fours under the grand stand until police took him in charge.

Two days later Private Alerich Love was arrested in Colon for carrying cocaine. Love admitted he had been using the drug 18 months and habitually purchased it in Colon.

Two weeks passed and Rosa Espinola de Fernandez, a Colombian, was arrested at Cristobal for importing four bottles of cocaine.

Iris White was arrested in Colon November 27, 1932, for "scandalous exhibition on a public highway."

As police closed in on her, she tried to swallow a paper believed to contain cocaine.

On March 4 of this year Frank Stewart Kelley was arrested in Cristobal for bringing into the Zone 225 grams of cocaine and 75 of morphine. He was seized when he alighted from a Pan-American plane from Barranquilla, Colombia.

Plane Steward Seized.

Previously John Pierre Glaessens, a Belgian steward on a Pan-American plane, was arrested in Cristobal, as he carried a paper sack containing 41 grams of cocaine taken from a plane arriving from San Salvador.

The ease with which smuggling and sale are carried on, it is stated in information received from the Zone, is not due to laxness on the part of the present police forces of the Zone or the republic, but to "higher-ups."

Chiefly blamed are certain members of the white and Negro and Indian mixtures who comprise the politically powerful upper class of Panama and who are reported to be financially interested in the drug traffic.

In the last two years Santo Tomas Hospital, financed by the Panamanian government, has figured in narcotics cases.

After one attempt was made to ship opium from the hospital to Coliba, a penal colony, the hospital superintendent, Dr. Arcelio R. Prieto, resigned. Prieto said he had made an investigation, the results of which he placed before authorities. That was the last heard of the incident, it was declared.

Not only laxness, but the proximity of the Canal Zone makes enforcement difficult, diplomatic authorities have been informed.

St. Marys Farmers Told of Wheat Plan

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 24 (Sp.). With corn and tobacco so badly damaged by the storm, farmers in this section are paying renewed attention to wheat. Right now they are being strongly urged by County Agent G. F. Wathen to study carefully the Federal plan for crop reductions and to cooperate in order to boost prices.

The agent is in the midst of an educational campaign to this end. He held a meeting in the Seventh District, at which Prof. E. L. Oswald spoke. Prof. F. W. Oldenburg addressed growers in the First and Eighth Districts. One meeting was held in Leonardtown and another at Chaptico. Further meetings are being arranged.

Worker Loses Fingers.

Berryville, Va., Aug. 24 (Sp.). Samuel Leake, of this county, lost three fingers this week when he caught his left hand in a knife while cutting laths at the Berryville Basket Co., where he is employed. Dr. A. P. Osborne gave first aid and sent him to the hospital in Winchester for further treatment.

Teaches Life Saving, But a Flood Was Too Much

Ira Lee Law, Red Cross life-saving instructor, came close to drowning when his canoe overturned during flood rescue work near Hyattsville. Nurse Lillian Kroll attended Mr. Law at Emergency Hospital, where he was taken.

Rescuers Escape Drowning As Flood Water Upsets Boat

Three Answering Call for Life-Saving Equipment Barely Miss Death.

Three rescuers, who answered the call of Hyattsville and Riverdale Fire Departments for life saving equipment, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday morning when one of their canoes capsized as they were trying to reach a flooded area.

Ira Lee Law, director of first aid and life saving instruction of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross, was thrown into the water between Mount Rainier and Hyattsville by a sudden rush of water which upset his boat.

Two companions, Elmer Hipsley and Leslie Herbert, life guards at the McKinley swimming pool, rescued him. The three men had secured the canoes after they were unable to get boats from the Harbor Police or the Navy Yard.

They loaded the canoes into an ambulance and took them to the flooded area, where the accident occurred. Law was knocked unconscious when the canoe overturned and was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Justice Tells Jury of Rackets And Tammany

Kernochan Testifies as Prosecutor Is Kept Out of Room.

New York, Aug. 24 (P).—New York County's grand jury, investigating charges of alliances between politicians and racketeers, today listened to the testimony of Chief Justice Frederic Kernochan of General Sessions Court.

Justice Kernochan was closeted with the jury for 33 minutes. Like United States Attorney George J. Medalle, the first witness, the justice had told the Senate's subcommittee on racketeering that Tammany politicians were linked with racketeers.

District Attorney Thomas C. C. Crain and his assistants again were barred from the room as the jury heard Justice Kernochan's testimony. He also was excluded when Medalle named four political leaders he charged were in collusion with racketeers.

Beginning today, individual air-liners will confer with Mr. Howes and determine what economies they can effect. United Airlines, American Airways, Eastern Air Transport and T. W. A. will be on today's program. The Postoffice Department has about $14,000,000 for operations this year, as against $19,000,000 last year. Contracts with the carriers total about $20,000,000.

Elliott and paid his uncle's fine and costs. "He's my uncle. I want to pay his fine," the child told the mayor. When the boy had dug down in his pocket for the fine and costs he had 15 cents left. He said he would buy his uncle a pair of socks with that.

Bogus Money Reported Made In U. S. Prison

Federal Officials Comb Leavenworth Cells as End of Trail.

(Associated Press.) The Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth was combed yesterday by United States Secret Service and Justice Department agents for evidence that counterfeit money was being carried on behind its walls by inmates.

Officials indicated coins were being counterfeited, but they were reticent about the investigation because they hoped to trap outside accomplices suspected of working with certain prisoners.

The inquiry is under the direction of Sanford Bates, superintendent of Federal prisons, and W. H. Moran, chief of the Secret Service. Moran and his force have been kept busy in recent years tracing down counterfeiters, and one of the trails uncovered led to the Leavenworth Prison.

The penitentiary was under fire recently because of liberties granted to Terrance Druggan, Chicago beer baron, by employees. The warden was reprimanded and the prison annex chaplain and two others were suspended after an investigation by the Justice Department.

Secret Service operatives recently disclosed there had been an increase in the production of both counterfeit coin and paper money. In the Leavenworth Prison are several inmates convicted of counterfeiting. It was indicated that some of them were suspected.

Once Proud Whaling Fleet Slides Quietly Into Oblivion

(Associated Press.) One of the most dramatic chapters in America's maritime history is drawing to a prosaic close.

The American whaling fleet, once a lusty institution and the inspiration for countless thrilling sagas of the sea, is on the verge of going out of existence, says A. J. Tyrer, assistant director of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection.

In the full flush of its activity, the fleet comprised some 200,000 gross tons. But it has been gradually reduced until today only 14 vessels of 9,367 gross tons are left. The fleet is made up of 13 steamers and 1 motorship.

In the day when whalers were an important part of the merchant fleet of the United States, almost every one was a sailing craft.

Headquarters Move West.

Since the time the first American whalers headed their well-provisioned vessels away from the New England coast late in the eighteenth century for their search of "swimming treasure," the headquarters of the fleet has moved completely across the continent.

Few old-time captains of whalers still live in cottages hard by the New England shores, where they can get a sight of the sea and a whiff of its salt, but all the American vessels with one exception now operate out of San Francisco and Seattle, Tyrer says.

The early records of the Bureau of Navigation show a whaling fleet of 4,129 gross tons in 1794. At this time the number of vessels was not a matter of record. By 1820 the fleet totaled 36,445 tons. By 1845

366 Hoarders Defy Federal Gold Demands

Government Has Trouble With Recalcitrants, Says Cummings.

Out of 5,629 gold hoarders in the country, 366 have refused to return their hoards to the Treasury, Attorney General Cummings said yesterday.

The Attorney General reported that 297 had returned their gold on demand by agents of the Department of Justice. Another 4,966, listed as hoarders, claimed that they already had returned their gold.

Agents Meet Trouble.

Future action against hoarders can not be announced yet, Mr. Cummings said. He has reported to the President on the first phase of the drive, which secured the return of nearly $39,000,000.

This first stage has been "successful, but highly troublesome," he said. Largest single return of gold was made by the British-American Tobacco Co., Ltd., of London, which turned back $8,249,240, he added.

What They Did With It.

Of the 366 "recalcitrants," 40 flatly refused to return their gold, according to Cummings. Another 24 refused to say whether they still had gold. Others claimed that they gave their gold to their friends and relatives, in amounts less than $100.

"A great many hundred million dollars" not listed by the Treasury was returned, Mr. Cummings said. One of the problems is to secure gold held by unlisted hoarders, he said.

Veterans Urge Repeal of NRA

Spanish War Convention Also Demands Pension Be Restored.

Los Angeles, Aug. 24 (P).—The National United Spanish-War Veterans' convention, which yesterday cheered speakers explaining pension reductions, today demanded that the national recovery act be repealed.

In a resolution demanding that repealed legislation affecting Spanish War veterans be restored, the convention pledged cooperation with veterans of other wars to safeguard veterans' interests.

The resolution said that for 35 years the Spanish War veterans had accepted the pension policy inaugurated by Congress at the close of the Civil War and that now, under new requirements, they find it virtually impossible to provide records proving disability in service.

The convention also demanded that the national defense bill, air and sea be built up "in full and complete compliance with the national defense act of 1920."

More than a dozen escaped by their cabins by the back doors and pulled themselves to safety on higher ground by clutching trees and shrubbery.

A Gordon Stup, of Rockville, fed when he found 8 inches of water on the floor of his cabin. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hahn, in the adjoining cabin, escaped in a motorboat. The family of Harold Kingsley, of Galtersburg, deserted a cabin before the flood waters struck. Several other residents were forced to flee.

A speedboat valued at $1,100 belonging to Walter Klein, of Frederick, was swept from its moorings and carried into the river. More than a dozen other boats belonging to residents were swept away or swamped. The road into Seneca was flooded.

More Game Animals in National Forest Increase 40 Per Cent in Six Years.

Game animals in the United States National Forests are estimated to have increased 40 per cent since 1926, according to figures for 1932, just issued by the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture.

The report gives a total for the 148 national forests of 1,153,142 big game animals. This figure is slightly lower than the 1931 total of 1,175,955.

Seventy-five per cent of all the Western big game range lies in the national forests.

While wild life is increasing in the national forests, it is still decreasing on much of the forest land of the country, even though under protection and planned management.

Chair Is Facing Two Youths in Bridal Murder

Last Hope Is Banished as Oklahoma Governor Denies Reprieve.

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 24 (P). Two young farmers, who plotted marriage of one and subsequent murder of his bride to collect $5,000 insurance, will die in the electric chair at State's Prison here shortly after midnight.

Claude Oliver, 23, and his nephew, George Oliver, 18, pleaded guilty last December, but, after being sentenced to death, appealed for a commutation to life imprisonment.

This was denied, and Gov. W. H. Murray, after twice staying the execution, destroyed their final hope yesterday with the terse dictum: "I'm going to let them go."

The 15-year-old girl wife, whom Claude Oliver married last August and insured for $5,000, was beaten to death November 3 in an auto. A Negro allegedly was paid $25 to "witness" the ostensible accident.

The two confessed that Claude drove the car while his nephew struck the girl bride with a heavy sled and that the husband held her while his nephew delivered the fatal blows with a tire iron.

Murder Jury Chosen to Try Stanford Man

Lamson's Battle for Life in Wife Slaying Gets Under Way Today.

San Jose, Calif., Aug. 24 (P).—A middle-aged jury of seven men and five women—eight of them gray-haired—was seated tonight to decide whether David A. Lamson best to death his young and attractive wife last Memorial Day in their cottage on the Stanford Campus.

Final acceptance of the jury came suddenly after four dreary days of skirmishing in the courtroom of Judge Robert R. Syer. Only 15 veniremen of the original 100 of the panel were left. The State had in reserve three peremptory challenges and the defense two.

Two alternate jurors, both women, also were selected. Assistant district attorneys were persistent in eliminating women from those in the jury box and the defense with equal diligence had eliminated men.

Attorneys will begin tomorrow the real battle to decide whether Lamson, 31-year-old sales manager for the Stanford University Press, is to die on the gallows of San Quentin Prison, or spend a large part of his life there, or go free.

The State contends Lamson, because of strife in the five years of his married life with the Y. W. C. A. secretary, crushed her head with a 10-inch piece of pipe, which deputy sheriffs later found in the embers of a bonfire.

The State will introduce the best scientific knowledge at the disposal of Santa Clara County officials.

The defense counter attack was expected to be directed toward efforts to create a "reasonable doubt" in the minds of the jurors.

Roosevelt Told Coal Code Near

Confers on Fiscal Matters With His Secretary of Treasury.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 24 (P).—President Roosevelt maintained close touch with the Nation's affairs in his rain-pelted home on the Hudson tonight, receiving a report of progress in efforts for a coal code, and inquiring into fiscal matters with his Secretary of the Treasury, William H. Woodin.

Mr. Roosevelt talked over the telephone with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, who informed him that the slow negotiations for a new and single working agreement for the coal industry were proceeding with the hope of successful conclusion.

Mr. Roosevelt also approved late today an allotment of $14,000,000 for the Missouri River development as recommended by the Public Works Administration under Secretary Ickes.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodin reached Hyde Park just at dusk, coming as dinner guests and remaining over night.

A parley on fiscal affairs will be followed tomorrow by a visit here by Lewis Douglas, director of the budget.

Retail Stores Aids Clash on Price Cutting

Percy S. Straus Raps Limit Rule at Code Hearing; Others Want It.

(Associated Press.)
Sharp disagreement between New York's big department stores over proposed price and advertising regulation arose yesterday at hearings on a code of competition for the Nation's vast retail trade.
B. H. Namm, speaking for 14 large stores, urged adoption of the proposed fair practice section of the code as security against unfair competition. Percy S. Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., assailed price-fixing and "advertising censorship."
One section of the fair practice provisions would prohibit retail sales at less than invoice cost, plus 10 per cent partially to cover labor costs. Others would forbid general underselling claims, misleading advertising or references to competitors in advertising.

Selling Price Limit.

The limitation on selling price, Mr. Namm, president of the Namm Store, Brooklyn, N. Y., said, was designed "to curb predatory or destructive price cutting."
"Price cutting," he added, "is the price cutting. Retaliation by other retailers frequently results in a general price war, often entailing operating below cost. The losses involved fall ultimately upon labor, swelling the ranks of the unemployed. Manufacturers have also suffered, some being 'chiseled' down to a point of sweatshop production."

Mr. Straus said that "if retail trade groups can fix prices at not more than invoice cost, plus 10 per cent, they will logically raise the margin to 15, 20 or even higher percentages."

Heretofore Held Illegal.

"The adoption of such a principle," he said, "will not increase consumption nor build purchasing power; it will choke the free flow of commerce and shrink volume. Price fixing agreements between manufacturers and retailers have heretofore been held illegal."

In advocating inclusion of these provisions in the code, Mr. Namm represented Abraham & Straus, Arnold Constable, Best, Bloomingdale's, Gimbels, Loew's, Lord & Taylor's, McCreary's, Oppenheimer & Collins, Saks, Franklin Simon, Stern's and Wanamaker—all large New York department stores.
The outlawing of false and misleading advertising and price cutting was also urged by P. C. Houlihan, furniture dealer of Cambridge, Mass.; Harry W. Reihl, general manager of the St. Louis Better Business Bureau, and William H. Hager, of Lancaster, Pa., president of the Pennsylvania Retailers Association.

Mortgagees Reject Home Loan Bonds

Morgantown Companies Declare First Duty Is to Stockholders.

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 24 (Sp.).—Morgantown building and loan associations will not, for the present at least, accept Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation bonds in preference to good first mortgages.
Following this announcement a group of real estate agents announced that several persons being indebted to associations plan to petition Federal authorities in an effort to have the loan organizations change their decision.

The loan association officials announced they had an obligation to their stockholders primarily and that they would take the position that good loans should be paid off rather than redeemed with the Government bonds.

Since 1930 no local building and loan associations have loaned money on real estate.

General Mills Acquires Two Southern Plants

Canadian Lines to Try Penny Excursions Again

Montreal, Quebec, Aug. 24.—Last spring the railways of Canada experimented with long-distance 1-cent per mile excursions. The innovation proved so successful that it is to be given another trial by both the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways this month.

This time the Pacific Coast is the attraction. Bargain rates will be in effect from all points west of the Great Lakes in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta to all Pacific Coast points, commencing August 18 and ending September 2.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)
Scrap Steel—Prices are off slightly from recent top levels in leading markets and business is quieter in harmony with the decline in steel mill activity.

Fuel Oil—A leading producer has advanced its maximum price for Grade C bunker fuel oil, 50 cents a barrel, to $1.60, along the North Atlantic seaboard and to $1.45, a barrel at Gulf ports, effective on 1934 contracts. Spot fuel oil has been raised 10 cents a barrel.

Chemicals—The textile industry, especially the rayon branch, continues to take a fair volume of industrial material, according to trade sources. Alkali shipments to the glass, petroleum and other industries are smaller than in July.

Copper—It is estimated in some trade quarters that the current trends in production and consumption are involving a reduction in stock at the rate of about 25,000 tons monthly.

Rice—Buyers are reported more willing to cover nearby requirements because they expect higher prices. Demand for spot rice and early new-crop product is on an expanding scale.

Exchange Acts On Extending Delivery Time

Giving 2 Full Days Seen as Adding to Efficiency of Brokers.

New York, Aug. 24 (Sp.).—Consideration of plans to extend delivery periods from the present approximately 24 hours to two working days, in order to lessen the burden on brokerage house organizations in active markets, was announced today by the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange.

The committee stated that formal action would be taken on the plans at a special meeting August 30. The change, it was said, for a number of years has been discussing the advisability of adopting a measure for second day deliveries with the idea of obviating "much of the night work which is the principal cause of fatigue in members' offices."

Foreed to Shorten Hours.

Owing to the business rush in 1932, and recently, the exchange was forced to shorten trading hours and even close for one or more business days.
The change in delivery periods would give securities which are being shipped from out-of-town an extra day in which to reach New York before delivery must be made, thus reducing the number of failures to deliver.

Would Eliminate Disputes.

It would also eliminate many of the disputes, it was pointed out, which arise now as to whether the customer or the broker shall pay interest on transactions which fail of delivery because the securities have not been received in time.
No change would be made in the existing call money market. Call loans would still be payable on demand and day loans would not be affected. Stocks would sell ex-dividend one delivery day earlier than at present.

Dried Fruits Steady.

New York, Aug. 24 (A.P.).—Dried fruits steady, unchanged.

"Deficit."

New York, Aug. 24 (Spl).—In a special comparative quarterly statement for the three months ended June 30, Associated Gas & Electric Co. reports a deficit of $645,522 after fixed interest charges. This is a decrease of $821,893, when compared with the same period of last year. This statement was prepared in connection with the plan for redemption of the 6% debentures of Associated Gas & Electric Co., as it was felt that the figures reflected a situation of grave concern to all debenture holders of the company.

Recent reports of increased electric output have caused the belief many hold that the company is experiencing a corresponding improvement in earnings would automatically result. This has not been the case.

Total operating revenues for the quarter ended June 30, 1962, were $1,000,000 under the figures for the same quarter of last year. This was owing to decreases in revenue from every branch of service. Association has been hit by the same decreases, as several other large utilities have reported even larger decreases in gross revenues. Further factors to be considered in weighing the effect of the plan are the savings under the plan are rate reductions, increased taxes and higher wages and prices under the national recovery act.

The statement concludes that in view of these facts there can be little question of the necessity for the plan and of the advisability of debenture financing of their bonds under some one of the options offered in the plan—preferably option 1. *

Kin of Penthouse Mystery Victim Says Wolcott Complained of Rival.

Pasadena, Calif., Aug. 24 (AP).—Testimony of frequent and bitter quarrels between Harold Wolcott and Helen Bendowski, 30-year-old victim of the "penthouse murder" was given today at Wolcott's preliminary hearing.

Clarence Burke, Pasadena banker and brother-in-law of Miss Bendowski, said she often bore marks on her body and on one occasion last November both of her eyes were blackened.

Miss Bendowski, comely beauty operator, was found shot to death on the roof near Wolcott's penthouse, over his floral shop here, August 13. Wolcott asserted she committed suicide.

Frank Burke, brother of Clarence, said Wolcott had come to his home an hour before Miss Bendowski was shot and "seemed terribly nervous."

"Wolcott said he had been playing poker and Miss Bendowski had left him, and that he had called police," Burke testified.

Under cross-examination, Frank Burke said Wolcott had told him he feared Maynard G. Meidema, a patrolman, had "double-crossed him and gone off with Miss Bendowski."

Dr. Thomas H. Hartner, Emergency Hospital surgeon, testified he found no powder marks on her body or clothing.

Meidema, discharged by the chief of police on the charge that he was withholding information, told newspapermen he would take the stand and "tell all." He was in Wolcott's penthouse at the time of the shooting.

Two Other Daughters to Whom She Gave Poison Recovering.

Pauls Valley, Okla., Aug. 24 (AP).—While her husband and two sons worked in the fields, Mrs. Bessie Ronsley, 39, yesterday gave poison to four daughters and herself, County Attorney Clarence Bowie said today.

The mother and two daughters, Forrest, 6, and Esther, 9, died. The other children, Hazel, 13, and Loretta, 10, are expected to recover.

Bowie said marital difficulties led to Mrs. Ronsley's act.

Mine Workers Plan Big Demonstration

Frostburg, Md., Aug. 24 (SPL).—The United Mine Workers of America, which recently instituted an organization campaign in the Georges Creek territory, will hold a Labor Day demonstration here.

Until recently, the membership had been but nominal. Nine newly organized groups will take part in the program, which will include a parade from the historic Eckhart Flat, the scene of demonstrations in strike periods 40 years back, to the Beall High School grounds.

A program will be presented and an address will be given by Representative David J. Lewis, Sixth Maryland district, a former miner.

Vacationists Safe At Bethany Beach

Washingtonians on vacation at Bethany Beach, Del., are safe, it was indicated yesterday. Aware of the large number of residents of the Capital at the resort, Commander McCandlish, of the Navy Department, ordered a query sent by radio to a station at the town.

A reply stated there were no casualties. A few buildings and boardwalks were destroyed. Roads still were inundated and power lines were out with the weather returning to normal.

Government Stays Out Of Alabama Lynching

Action against an Alabama sheriff whose two prisoners were lynched was refused yesterday by Attorney General Cummings, since there had been no violation of Federal statutes.

Action was asked by a group of 15 lawyers. Local members were Augustus W. Gray, president of the Washington Bar Association; James G. Tyson and Edward P. Lovett.

Turn About

Fair Play for Republican U. S. Attorneys in Areas Fair to Democrats.

The treatment to be accorded to Republican U. S. district attorneys under the Democratic administration will depend on the treatment given Democratic incumbents when the Republicans came into power, Attorney General Cummings said yesterday.

"Where Democratic predecessors were treated fairly, there will be a tendency to treat Republican district attorneys in the same way," the Attorney General said. He explained this as meaning that if Republicans, when they came into power in 1921, dismissed a certain Democratic attorney at once, the same thing would be done to that man's Republican successor.

Culbertson on Bridge

The Knave of Clubs.

My editorial associate, Mr. Walter Malowan, once wrote a story about the various unpleasant things that had happened to him in connection with the Knave of Clubs. Probably, however, after a recent experience of his in the experts' room at Crockford's Club, where, no doubt, the best Rubber Bridge in the world is played today, he will feel more kindly toward this card than he has felt in the past.

Mr. Malowan, according to his original story, has lost games, slams and rubbers just because the Knave of clubs had an unusual facility for turning up where it should not be. His most recent experience, however, has nullified all these former unhappy events.

The hand was:

South, Dealer.

East and West vulnerable; both sides, part-score 60.

The bidding:

South West North East

1♠ 1♠ Pass Pass

1NT Pass 2♦ 2♥

2♠ Pass Pass Pass

West opened the King of hearts and East played the heart 5. West then switched to the Ace of Spades, upon which East dropped the Knave. South won the second round of spades with the King.

It will be noted that Dummy has only one entry-card—the Queen of spades—the use of which must be conserved until it can do the most good.

South now drew three rounds of trumps, happily finding a break in the trump suit. He then followed with the Queen of clubs. Obviously this with the Ace and returned a small heart. The Ace of hearts was, of course, marked in the West hand as East would not have passed the one-spade bid with two Aces nor, as a matter of fact, would West have led the heart King lacking both the Queen and the Ace. Therefore, Mr. Malowan played the heart Ten. West won with the Ace and returned another heart, which South won with the Queen.

The Declarer now had a perfect count on the West hand. Obviously there had been five spades in it—as East had shown the possession of only two—three hearts and three diamonds—and, in consequence, there could be but one club left. South could make his contract if he held the opponents to one club, and it was thus a question of guessing the location of the Knave of clubs. Mr. Malowan played a small spade from his hand, winning with the Queen in Dummy, and then led the Ten of clubs. If East had covered this card, all guess on the hand would have been avoided. However, when East played small, South had to make a guess. East had three clubs and West only one. Therefore, the chances were three to one that East had the Knave of clubs. But Mr. Malowan remembered the bidding. East had shown the Knave of spades, the Knave of hearts and the Ace of clubs, and it was extremely improbable that he would have passed his partner's one-spade bid if he held the Knave of clubs in addition. Quite probably, were this the case he would have bid two clubs over West's one-spade bid, as this would have been sufficient to win the game and rubber. Reviewing all these facts, Mr. Malowan was quite sure that the Knave of clubs was in the West hand, and, with confidence, played the King, dropping the blank Knave and thereby making his three-diamond contract, sufficient for the game.

Tomorrow's Hand.

In what manner should South plan the play of the hand below at a contract of four spades, against which West had opened the heart 5?

The Better Business Bureau Pledges Its Aid to The NRA

The legislation upon which the NRA program is founded has for part of its purpose the control and elimination of unfair methods of competition. Untruth in advertising, misrepresentation and trickery, and fraud in selling are unfair methods of competition against which the Better Business Bureau of Washington has long waged continuous warfare.

Hours and wages properly come first in the Government program. In the not so distant offing are codes of fair competition—agreements restraining improper methods of advertising and selling. These are matters near to the heart of not only the Better Business Bureau but also to the hundreds of merchants, newspapers and others who have for years striven for just what the Government program includes.

The Better Business Bureau pledges its aid and cooperation to the National Recovery Administration.

NAVIN FIELD, Detroit, Mich., Aug. 24 (Sp.).—Mr. Griffith's Nats, who go slugging at the sight of certain pitchers, caught a glimpse of three Detroit hurlers today and went completely batty on the subject of base hits. With a toothhold on their bats, they swung from their heels this afternoon and connected with a 13-to-6 victory.

While the Nats were spraying 17 large and lucious base hits over the premises at Navin Field, the Yankees over in Cleveland were conducting a nice little 10-to-1 scalping party to maintain the pace and continue eight games in the rear of Washington, with New York's pennant chances thus showing no improvement rapidly.

Whitehill Knocked Out.

The lone sour note of the afternoon's performance for the Nats was Earl Whitehill's failure to connect with his eighth straight pitching victory. Whitehill did not have what it takes today and left for an afternoon shower in the third inning after the Tigers had showered him with eight hits that put them in a 3-to-2 lead.

Heinie Manush was present again today in a very large way, however, connecting for a single in the very first inning that extended to 32 his consecutive game hitting streak that now lacks only nine games of the all-time record set by George Sisler. Manush also delivered another single and a double before the game was over.

But the slugging end of the afternoon was Goose Goslin, who broke into the game as a pinch-hitter, and broke up the game with his eighth home run and his ninth home run. Goose sounded the tocsin, or something, for the finishing blows to the Tigers when he batted for Dave Harris in the seventh and slammed the first pitch on a streamline over the right field wall against Vic Frasier. That was the start of a five-run rally.

The Goose put the finishing touches on a three-run uprising in the ninth when he smacked the rookie, Elden Auker, for an ever longer home run into the distant right center field bleachers with Boss Cronin waiting on third base.

Russell Is Effective.

The Nats had plenty of encouragement from Jack Russell after Whitehill left the box. Russell stopped a rally in the third inning and then permitted only an infield single until the end of the third inning, which cut the Nats' lead to 10-6.

Their old pal, Carl Fischer, appeared against the Nats at the outset and pitched the first two runs in the first inning when Myers and Manush singled and Dave Harris, the clean-up hitter, very properly cleaned up with a stinging single to center field that scored 'em both.

The Tigers came back in that first with two runs on their own account, but Walker, after singling, messed matters up when he took too long a lead off first and was trapped by Whitehill and run down.

Double Play Helps.

Detroit went out in front, 3-2, in the third, helped by Schulte's failure to hold on to Doljack's line drive, and Owen's single, the eighth off of Whitehill in 2-1-3 innings, drove the home run. Whereupon Russell went in and pulled them out of the hole with a double play.

Washington promptly tied the score at 4-4 in the fourth when Harris walked, was pushed to second by Schulte, and ultimately scored on Sewell's long fly. In the fifth the Nats stepped out to a 2-run lead when Myer singled, Manush doubled and Schulte doubled. They met up with Frasier in the seventh and 10 Nats went to bat in a 5-run rally. Goslin pinch hit for Harris and started 'em off with his home over the right field wall. Schulte singled, Kuehl doubled, Sewell and Russell walked, the latter forcing in a run, Gehring fumbled Myer's grounder and Manush singled over second to drive over the last two of the inning's five tallies.

The Tiger threat in the eighth started with two out and continued in three runs when they got four consecutive hits off Russell, with Fox's triple the feature.

With their lead thus cut to a mere four runs, the Nats went out in the ninth and picked up three more on a single by Myer, a triple by Cronin and home run No. 2 for the Goose.

20,000 See Equipoise Beat Gallant Sir in $25,000 Hawthorne Gold Cup Race

Whitney Ace Victor by 2 Lengths

Sixth Win in Row Puts Equipoise Third in Money Earnings.

Odds-on Choice Wins in Final Furlong; Mr. Khayyam Third.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—After a stirring stretch drive in which Gallant Sir, handicap champion of the West, raced stride for stride with him, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's great 5-year-old thoroughbred, Equipoise, came on to win the $25,000 Hawthorne Gold Cup race today in the last furlong.

With a crowd of 20,000 cheering him on, the little bay son of Penant—Swinging finished two lengths ahead of Gallant Sir.

The victory was Equipoise's sixth consecutive triumph of the season. Today's purse of $17,250 increased his total winnings to $314,420, making him the third highest money winner on the American turf. He is exceeded only by Sun Beam, with $376,744, and Gallant Fox, $323,165.

Equipoise Pays $2.36. A heavily backed odds-on favorite, Equipoise paid $2.36 in $2 mutes to win, $2.12 to place. Show price was $1.20. He went to the post at 1 to 5. Gallant Sir paid his backers $2.32 to show.

Mr. Khayyam, the Catawba Farms American Derby winner, the only 3-year-old in the race, finished third, after setting the pace, in 1:15.5 seconds, within 1 1/2 seconds of the track record, held by Sun Beam.

Carrying 126 pounds, Equipoise covered the mile and a quarter in 2 minutes 24.5 seconds, within 1 1/2 seconds of the track record, held by Sun Beam.

C. H. McCaffrey's Big Brand was fourth and Plucky Play, Gallant Sir's stable mate, was fifth and last. Indian Runner and Jim Dandy were scratched, leaving a field of five.

At the Post... with Bill Bennings.

Hawthorne, Aug. 24. I had to dig into the chalk box for my winners today. Off to a good start when Rummold outclassed the opposition in the opener.

I had to wait for Equipoise to make it two for the program. However, I was heavily represented on down the line. Happy New Year to F. C. B. who wrote that letter which I will quote in part: "I always like to see who Bennings picks because I have one less horse to bother with when I'm looking for the winner."

Be that as it may, your old pal, William, shall struggle along. Understand that the Marlboro track is under water. If it stays that way we may get a winner or two. My friend, Christmas, has a couple down there who swim the breast stroke. Keep in the swim tomorrow with these.

First race—Boy Valet broke from the No. 1 post position and has shown enough in recent races to warrant a top selection in this field of maidens. Wilco and Skimalong should take care of the others.

Second race—Very Well will do in this field. Commendation of the clockers and is lightly weighted. Bill Orange appears to have the place in his grip. Sir Anthony for the money and may find speed enough to take it all.

Third race—Martie Flynn is far too sharp to pass up in this field. May draw Westmore and then it would be all over but the shouting. Any price is a good one. Renewed one that I have been trying to put over, will be ready to cash if the top one goes amiss. Fiddler for the show.

Fourth race—Till let Amersy run for the Bennings dough here. The big "Scram" horse is fit and ready. Mumsie and Benevolence for the other awards.

Fifth race—As much as I think unnumbered will be a keen factor in this race, I can't overlook Lemon Hills. I warned you of this fellow when he first ran hereabouts. He has closed fast in sprints and looks like a cinch at this route. Yonker for the rest.

Sixth race—Foxiana can represent me in this field. Will have Hillsborough and Islam to beat. The last named might be the answer to the question, but I'm afraid that oil hasn't worn off—if you know what I mean.

Seventh race—This field is so cheap it cracks. And I'm going to try to squeeze a good price out of it. Suppose we let Waterport do our running. Ping Coates and St. Nazaire to complete the money picture.

Eighth race—Spurian Lady appears to be the best this finale of races. Crapshooters for the place and Helen Bab, with a feather up, for the show.

A little thing like a flood failed to stop these Washington golfers. Finding the Potomac Park course submerged by the rising waters of the Potomac, this hardy foursome donned bathing suits and played their daily round, swimming at times to reach some of the tees and greens. Photo shows Harold Bowers putting on the first green, while his companions, Bobbie Bowers, Al Farr and Ray Henry, lend dripping assistance.

Walt Mason, Himself

Some Day.

THE hungry artist plies his brush and does not murmur or repine: some day he knows there'll be a rush to buy his masterpieces. Some day the critics will applaud, and jealous rivals will expire, and he will have a gorgeous wad, and flourish like a house afire. So bravely he maintains his stride, and goes to triumph or defeat; what ever fortune may befall, his dreams are comforting and sweet. Some day the bard who feels the goad of poverty and countless ills, will write a majestic ode, and climb Fame's timeless stairs. Some day, some day he'll surely burst upon the world in a blaze of light; and meanwhile lack of wienersurst can not distress him or affright. So in his effort he persists, there in his garret cold and dim; the future holds, he wots and wists, a never fading wreath for him. Some day perhaps he'll join the streams of pilgrims to the poorhouse door; but he has had his happy dreams, and they were sold, and something more. We couldn't stand life's stress and strain but for our dreams of joy ahead; and we couldn't stand the grief and pain that border every path we tread. Some day, we think, we're bound to win, so let's forget the present stings; some day our ships will all come in, and we shall loaf around with kings.

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

New York—The night club industry is undergoing a little recovery drive of its own. Not since 1928 have the tinsel taverns been so crowded as they have during the past few weeks.

Walking into one of the better-known clubs the other night, I was amazed to see every table occupied and several other parties waiting in the lobby for a chance to be seated.

Night club impresarios are as astounded and mystified, although delightedly so, as any one else over the sudden upturn of spending in the late-hour places. The only explanation they can make is that people have more money to spend, or they think they have.

Sad Music.

This department's NRA item of this week concerns the musicians. They are somewhat puzzled as to how they will get around that maximum 40-hour week clause.

If playing in a theater, they have to furnish music at least 6 hours a day, which practically uses up their 40 hours right there. How, they now wonder, are they going to get enough extra hours for rehearsing? The only solution seems to be to each place will have to hire two orchestras, each to play half a week. Otherwise, the folks are going to hear some pretty sad music.

Being of a patriotic nature, this column naturally plans to go under the NRA code. My big problem to be ironed out the fellow at the desk, dear readers, is how to increase my working hours to 40 a week.

Newaki Hemaki.

A journalistic pilgrim returning from Moscow reports that a Broadway night life reporter would be an ideal correspondent in Russia. It seems that the Soviet bureau of press relations makes its news announcements nightly at 2:30 a. m.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

OUR new-found interest in vitamins and minerals as ingredients of foods should not cause us to forget that the sources of calories are even more important in diet. It is these that furnish the fuel and the repairs for the machine and if they be absent the works are liable to stop going, or to begin running slow, long before any effects of mineral or vitamin starvation can be noticed.

Of the sources of calories the most important are those responsible for repair as well as energy. These are the proteins. For a long time diet lists have classified starchy and sweet foods by the amount of carbohydrates they contain. It is possible now to get diet lists that classify proteins and fats in the same way. One such list gives the following classification of protein foods:

8 Per Cent.
Dry apricots, beef juice, liver juice, oysters, green peas.

10 Per Cent.
Bacon, bran breads.

15 Per Cent.
Chocolate, eggs, egg yolk, fish, ham, kidney, lung, macaroni, nuts, oatmeal, sweetbreads.

20 Per Cent.
Dry lima beans (also called butter beans), chicken, cocoa, cottage cheese, fish, lamb, liver, nuts, tongue, veal.

25 Per Cent.
Lean beef, cream cheese, lean lamb, dry lentils, dry peas, peanuts.

30 Per Cent.
Dry beef, peanut butter.

90 Per Cent.
Gelatin.

You will notice that the amount of fat in a food or of moisture has much to do with determining its class. It is also well to remember that the different proteins vary in value as human foods, for protein is a compound and not a simple substance. The best of the proteins for humans is that found in human milk. The others rank as follows:

Animal milk proteins, meat proteins and vegetable proteins.

For general body repair gelatin ranks poorly, in spite of its 90 per cent protein.

Ten per cent—Oatmeal, crackers, zwieback, eggs, brains, white meat of chicken.

Twenty per cent—Avocado, soy beans, olives, thin cream, beef loin.

Forty per cent—Peanuts, heavy cream.

Fifty per cent—Almonds, Chocolate, peanut butter.

Sixty per cent—Brazil nuts, butternuts, walnuts.

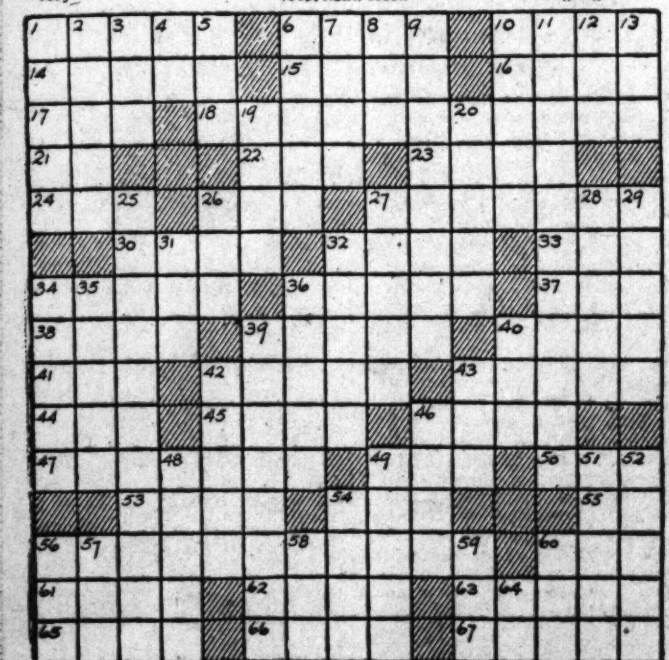

One reason for the delay in making up such tables is the variation in fats in foods as they are marketed and as they are prepared by cooks, and as the eater picks. Firm, very dry, unsalted butter may be nearly pure fat. However, a good deal of water-salt is worked into some butter. Bacon is a streak of fat and a streak of lean, but in some articles the fat streak overshadows the lean. Midding may be almost all fat. Oatmeal as it comes on the table may be very low in fat, but when garnished with butter and cream it may be otherwise. Bread is one thing, buttered bread another. When we eat roast beef we may eat the lean and leave the fat.

Loan Request Of Arlington To Be Revised

More Information Asked Concerning County's Sewerage Plans.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, CLARENDON, VA.

Because of a circular issued by the Public Works Administration it will be necessary to make slight changes in the county's application for a loan of $2,250,000 for installation of a county-wide sewerage system, County Manager Roy S. Braden said yesterday on his return from Richmond. Additional information is sought.

The county manager said he would compile the added information and make the required changes in the draft of the application so that it may be returned to the State advisory committee without delay.

"Time means more than anything else in getting our application acted upon," Braden added. "It is hoped to have contractors at work before snow flies. As soon as assurance is given the funds can be obtained. I am sure the county board will immediately have the court set a date for a special election on the proposed bond issue."

The Gloth Trophy pumper contest will feature the annual field day of the Arlington-Fairfax Counties Volunteer Firemen's Association at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Pershing Drive and Glebe road.

This contest is held annually. The trophy was donated in 1931 by William C. Gloth, former Commonwealth's Attorney, and it must be won three times for permanent possession. The cup was won by the Ballston Department in 1931 and by the Clarendon Department last year.

The Gloth competition is the only running hook-up contest on the program and has been reduced to 250 feet instead of the usual 500-foot run. The only other pumper contest will be the standing hook-up.

Plans will be perfected by the Cherrydale Baptist Church of Arlington County at a meeting tonight to send Mr. and Mrs. Otto Deming as its first two missionaries to the foreign field. They will go to the Un evangelized African Mission in Belgian Congo. Deming is to be ordained to the ministry at the meeting.

$10,000 Damage Estimated; 50 Cellars Reported Flooded.

Damage to Arlington County roads as a result of flooding was estimated yesterday at $10,000.

Most serious was the washout of the abutment and more than 100 feet of roadway along Glebe road at the bridge crossing Four Mile Run. The worst damage was done to the gravel roads. All roadmen were at work early yesterday clearing away more than 100 uprooted trees.

Reports from County Manager Roy S. Braden's office showed more than 50 cellars flooded. County pumps worked overtime removing water. Braden announced fire engines would not be used in pumping out cellars.

Fatal Auto Driver Flees Prison Farm

Accotink Man First Was Confined in Asylum, Where He Escaped.

Virginia prison authorities are having difficulty keeping Walter Bayliss, of Accotink, Va., where they put him.

Bayliss is under a sentence of two years for manslaughter. About a year ago he was indicted in Fairfax County for the "automobile death" of a Washington colored man near Pohick. He was examined, found of unsound mind and sent to the Hospital at Staunton. After a few months he took "French leave." Fairfax police were notified and he was arrested at his home. The hospital authorities then certified that he was sane enough to be transferred to the State Prison Farm.

Bayliss was held in the Fairfax jail for several weeks before being taken to the State Farm. Yesterday Sheriff E. P. Kirby received a telegram from the State authorities that Bayliss had again escaped.

2 Unhurt as Auto Drops Off Bridge

Fairfax Men Thrown Into Stream as Weakened Span Gives Way.

Langdon C. Painter, of Hybla Valley, recent Democratic candidate for the Virginia House of Delegates from Fairfax County, and his brother, Henry L. Painter, also of Hybla Valley, narrowly escaped death yesterday when their automobile plunged through Cameron Run Bridge, on Telegraph road, near Alexandria.

The bridge, weakened by the heavy storms, threw the car and its passengers into the whirling water. They succeeded in swimming to shore unhurt.

It is believed that the road will be closed several months until the bridge can be replaced by the State highway department.

Mellon's Son and Other Prominent Riders Star in Fauquier Classic

3,000 See Contests on First Day of Horse Show in Warrenton.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 24 (Spl.). Three thousand persons attended the first day's performance of the Warrenton thirty-fourth annual horse show, which had been delayed for a day, the first time in the history of the association that bad weather had necessitated a postponement.

From early morning until the last class, model hunters, was shown as the sun was setting, the performances and general quality of the entries were exceptional. Mud clung to the feet of the jumpers, but, despite this, the performance on the whole was above par. Mrs. J. H. Whitney, of Liancolen, with three winners, and Dr. L. M. Allen, of Winchester, with three blues, were the noteworthy victors.

Mrs. Whitney scored with Loro in the Warrenton Hunt Trophy, with Gray Knight in the lightweight class, and again with Bon Diable in the middle and heavy weight hunters. In addition, she carried off two reds and a yellow ribbon.

Dr. Allen's winners.

Dr. Allen's winners were Red Tape twice, once in the model hunter class and again ladies' hunters, and with Clifton's Rose in the novice hunters. Capt. Martin Carson of Headquarters Troop, Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, annexed two blues with his big bay gelding, Wise. His victories came in the free for all handicap and the open jumping class.

Paul Mellon, of Upperville, nephew of the former Secretary of the Treasury, riding his own gelding, Dublin, took a red and a yellow in the jumping classes. Misses Charlotte and Kitty Smith, of Middleburg, took the blue and the red in ponies over fences and were first with Comely in the pony saddle class. Louis Leith, who has ridden in every Warrenton show since its organization took a bad fall on George Plummer's Bit of Gold, but with no serious result.

The riding of Miss Ellie Wood Page Keith, of Charlottesville, and Miss C. Patricia Downes, of Warrenton, in the pony jumping class brought much applause.

Sacrifice, owned by Benton Stables, took the blue in the most attractive class of all to the spectators, the Handy Hunter Sweepstakes, which included opening and closing of a gate and jumping in and out of a pen. Stop watches were held on the entries.

Vernon G. Owen, of Washington, won in the saddle-horse class, with Miss Marjorie Lee McLeod, of Bethesda, Md., who piloted his Jack Lightning to victory. Middleburg took the pack-hound class with Bob Maddue, huntsman, for the winning team. The weather was good.

President Says They'll Be Hired for Another Six Months if Unable to Find Jobs in Private Industry.

A personal message from the President today is being read to Civilian Conservation Corps workers in each of the 1,440 work camps in the country.

The message informs the men they may be reenrolled in the corps for another six months, but asks them to find jobs in private industry if possible. In this way, vacancies will be created which can be filled with other unemployed men.

President's Message.

"The President has authorized the continuance of the Civilian Conservation Corps camps for another six months' enrollment at full strength, that is, the plan under which the initial six months' enrollment was made will be continued for a second six months' period."

"The President makes an appeal to every enrolled man to find a job if possible, either through his own efforts, the efforts of his family or any agency set up for that purpose."

Wants Chances for Others.

"The President does not want any enrolled man to accept a job that means the displacement of somebody else. This policy will give an opportunity whenever a present enrollment man secures a job in private industry for some other boy who is out of luck and hasn't had a chance to get in, to take the place of the boy who goes out."

"If any of the boys now enrolled, after making an honest effort to find a job, can not do so, then the President will authorize that boy to reenroll for another six months' period."

"The President believes this policy fairly carried out will be beneficial both to the present enrolled men and to others who desire to enroll for the second six months' period."

Definite settlement of the Catalano Construction Co. wage dispute, pending several weeks, is expected today.

Dominic Catalano, head of the Baltimore team, yesterday sought a compromise in payment of the $12-a-day prevailing wage to bricklayers. He suggested to William H. Whaley, assistant corporation counsel, that he be permitted to pay $12 only when a bricklayer lays 900 bricks a day. No decision was reached in the absence of Corporation Counsel William W. Bridge.

Two weeks ago the contractor was allowed until today to make adjustments with bricklayers and laborers on the Phelps Vocational School. Previously he had reported that carpenters were being paid the prevailing wage and that adjustments had been made on back pay.

Public Interest Is First, Power Board Asserts

Valley Authority Comes Out for Public Ownership.

(Associated Press.)

A flat declaration that the generation and distribution of electric power "is a public business" was made by the Tennessee Valley Authority yesterday in laying down a broad policy for developing the big Southern River.

Without mincing words, the authority asserted its purpose to control power development in the valley with the public interest paramount in mind.

The board, created by Congress to carry out President Roosevelt's far-reaching plan for development of the Tennessee Valley, served notice that the adverse effect of its actions on privately owned companies would be given serious consideration, but would not be "the determining factor."

Lays Out "Initial Areas."

To provide a "workable and economic basis of operations" the authority laid out three "initial areas" for development of its program. They are:

"1. The region immediately proximate to the route of the transmission line to be constructed by the authority between Muscle Shoals and the site of the Norris Dam.

"2. The region in proximity to Muscle Shoals, including Alabama and northeastern Mississippi.

"3. The region in the proximity of Norris Dam (the new source of power to be constructed by the authority on the Clinch River in northeast Tennessee)."

Public Ownership Upheld.

Another significant policy enunciated was that a community has an "undeniable right" to own and operate its own electric plant to protect itself against unreasonable rates.

The board's policy was laid down after weeks of study by David E. Lilienthal, director in charge of power development and distribution. It was stated in 11 points, some of the more important of which follow:

"The business of generating and distributing electric power is a public business.

"Private and public interests in the business of power are of a different kind and should not be confused.

Public Interest First.

"The interest of the public in the widest possible use of power is superior to any private interest. Where the two conflict, public interest must prevail.

"The right of a community to own and operate its own electric plant is undeniable. This is one of the measures which the people may properly take to protect themselves against unreasonable rates.

"The fact that action by the authority may have an adverse economic effect upon a privately owned utility should be a matter for the serious consideration of the board in framing and executing its power program. But it is not the determining factor. The most important considerations are the furthering of the public interest in making power available at the lowest rate consistent with sound financial policy."

Shoals Line Started.

Driving of the first stake for the first power transmission line between Muscle Shoals line and the proposed Norris Dam at Cove Creek was announced yesterday by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The stake was driven by a survey party at a river crossing near Dam No. 3, 20 miles above Muscle Shoals.

Linking of NRA And Renovize Drives Sought

Appeal to Housewives for Home Repairs Suggested to Canvassers.

Linking of the renovize campaign with the house-to-house drive by women workers seeking NRA consumers' pledges was suggested at NRA headquarters yesterday.

It was urged that the volunteer women workers appeal to housewives to have necessary home repairs made at this time.

Pledge cards and stickers, sent here from New York, are expected to be available tomorrow. Lack of these has held up the drive.

Thomas P. Littlepage, head of the Chamber of Commerce, said complaints concerning violations by employers are being filed and will be investigated as soon as the constructive work is completed.

At a meeting of women workers yesterday morning a report was made of more than 2,000 families canvassed. Of these 99.6 per cent signed pledges.

Mrs. Frederick J. Brenner, captain of the Brookland division, announced the appointment of the following lieutenants:

Mrs. Charles E. Stickle, Mrs. Joseph Baumer, Mrs. A. U. Smith, Mrs. Donald Kester, Mrs. John Koepfer, Mrs. Margaret Doran, Mrs. E. D. Milstead, Miss Elizabeth Wilson and Mrs. Jessie Mitchell.

Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, captain of the Harvard Terrace group, announced the following as her lieutenants:

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, Mrs. Harry A. Austin, Mrs. Edward Stevens, Mrs. Ivan Riley, Mrs. Lou Woodruff, Mrs. G. L. Peckham, Miss Margaret Forbes, Miss Audrey Hazell, Miss Martha E. Armstead, Miss Dorothy Tripp, Mrs. Helen M. Hunter and Miss Marion Hunter.

Dreamers Not Welcome In Blue Eagle Campaign

Idealists and dreamers have no place in the NRA program, Thomas P. Littlepage, general of the recovery movement in the Capital, said yesterday in addressing a meeting of the Kiwanis Club in the Mayflower.

"We are moving into a new economic and financial era, not a Utopia," he said.

President Dewey Zirkow was in charge.

Police Chief Would Follow Law, Were He to Staff Again

THOMAS P. LITTLEPAGE

Linking of the renovize campaign with the house-to-house drive by women workers seeking NRA consumers' pledges was suggested at NRA headquarters yesterday.

It was urged that the volunteer women workers appeal to housewives to have necessary home repairs made at this time.

Pledge cards and stickers, sent here from New York, are expected to be available tomorrow. Lack of these has held up the drive.

Thomas P. Littlepage, head of the Chamber of Commerce, said complaints concerning violations by employers are being filed and will be investigated as soon as the constructive work is completed.

At a meeting of women workers yesterday morning a report was made of more than 2,000 families canvassed. Of these 99.6 per cent signed pledges.

Mrs. Frederick J. Brenner, captain of the Brookland division, announced the appointment of the following lieutenants:

Jazz Out!

Smooth, Even Rhythm in Dance Is Made, Says
Tertipshore Master.

International events cast their shadow even in the land of tertipshore.

The undulating body of the great American public is going to sway alternately to Cuban rhythm, and the Nira, newest of dance steps.

According to Leroy Thayer, Washington delegate to the fiftieth jubilee of the Dancing Masters of America in New York, smooth, even rhythms will strike the keynote of the season's dance tempo.

"The unnatural jazz rhythm is a thing of the past," said Thayer. "The pace incited by the war and the subsequent nerve tension found outlet in jagged, thumpy melodies. The return to normalcy is here. A dance floor will no longer resemble a tumultuous whirlpool. Rather, it will suggest softly undulating waves of motion."

Thieves Get Cigarettes And Cash From Store

Rudolph McDuffie, manager of a chain grocery store at 3612 Fourteenth street northwest, yesterday reported to police that thieves forced entrance to the store and escaped with cigarettes and cash totaling $65.

McDuffie said a grating was removed from a rear window. The cash register was looted of $40 and cigarettes valued at $25 were stolen, he said.

Eel and Catfish Swim Into Zoo in Deluge

The Zoo had two post-deluge enlistments yesterday, a 3-foot eel and a 3-pound catfish.

When workmen went to work at the Zoo's machine shop yesterday, they found the floor under 3-feet of water. The eel and catfish had followed the rise of Rock Creek. The catfish, oddly enough, proved more slippery than the eel, for it eluded its pursuers and ducked down a sewer. Mr. Eel was caught, retained, and fried soon after.

So high did Rock Creek rise that a number of ducks and swans were found swimming about in picnic grounds, many yards from their reservation, shortly after daybreak.

Can Retire in January.
"My first arrest? Oh, yes, it was a drunken colored woman. I picked her up out of a gutter and took her to the station. In those days there was no penalty for intoxication. We let them sleep it off at the station and turned them loose next morning."

Other than his work, the major's chief joy is motoring. This desire to explore the surrounding country comes from his youth, when he was one of the best cyclists in Washington.

He is in the best of health, and never has been bothered with habits of dissipation. He does not drink or smoke. His only encounter with tobacco was when he was caught chewing behind his father's barn. A sound whipping by his mother ended that.

Although the major will be eligible for retirement on his sixtieth birthday—next January—he has no thought of giving up the job. He is in his prime.

Wider E Street At 'Bottleneck' Wins Approval

Jobless Men to Be Employed on Improvement
Near White House.

Widening of E street west of Fifteenth street northwest has been approved, and the work will begin at once, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the Office of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations, announced yesterday.

This change will remove the present traffic bottleneck where E street, improved east of Fifteenth street, suddenly narrows. Not only E street but also the circular road, way back of the White House will be widened to the corner of West Executive avenue and State place.

The work will be done with unemployed labor furnished by the District government. It will be financed from the public works funds allotted to the District for road work. Both the Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission have approved the widening. The grounds of Sherman Square will be regraded and replanted, but no trees will be removed in the widening.

The youth was overtaken and held until the arrival of Tenth Precinct police.

Stay Home!

Jobless Girl Asks Married Women Be Forced to Care for Children.

A plea to the "Honorable Governor of Washington" to do something to make married women stay at home will be heard by the District Commissioners yesterday by the District Commissioners.

A single woman of Hackensack, N. J., who signed her letter "An unemployed," complained that married women, their children, and their husbands are all working and consequently are able to own and rent houses, while single girls can get no jobs.

"If you would kindly see to it that all of the married women that are working will stay home, where they belong, they would have better children," the writer suggested.

Whoa! Maj. Brown Bans Nudist Bible; Book Sellers Say "Not So Hot."

The cause of nudism ran into new trouble in Washington yesterday. Superintendent of Police Maj. Brown was responsible.

Maj. Brown decreed that Washington readers, nudists or just plain curious, are not going to buy the "nude bible" here. The "bible" is Jan Jay's critical and illustrated "book" on nudism, "On Going Naked."

Book sellers described the work as "not very exciting," but Maj. Brown issued orders that it shall not be sold.

The work is a summary of nudism in various parts of the world, and has been on the market two years.

Originally marketed for $2.50 to $3, the book now brings but $1. Washington booksellers were surprised to learn that any were being sold at all.

The book, they said, never did go over very well—even with the illustrations.
